BULLETIN

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 1 (AP)—Amelia Earhart landed at San Juan at 1:30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, today on the first hop of her proposed "just for fun" flight around the world.

Miami, Fla., June 1 (AP)—Amelia Earhart took off for San Juan, Puerto Rico, at 5:57 a. m. (E. S. T.) today on a second attempt to fly around the world "just for fun."

The slim aviatrix waved a bare arm in farewell and then gunned the big, twin-motored monoplane some 2200 feet along the runway before she lifted it easily into the brilliant tropical dawn.

Just before the takeoff, her husband, George Palmer Putnam, leaned into the cockpit to kiss her goodby and shake hands with her navigator, Captain Fred Noonan, who is to accompany her on the 28,000-mile west-to-east journey.

1033-MILE HOP

Putnam planned to remain in Miami until his wife reaches Natal, Brazil, her jumping-off place for Africa. A commercial airline (Pan-American) will monitor her flight over its regular route to South America and expects to have reports on her progress.

Miss Earhart planned to cruise the 1033 miles to San Juan at a leisurely 150 miles an hour to test her plane further and said she would return to Miami if anything went amiss.

Aboard the silver-colored craft were emergency food provisions, a rubber lifeboat and lifebelts in case of a forced landing at sea. The tanks of the ship, a land plane, were equipped so they could be emptied quickly and would serve to keep it afloat.

From San Juan, Miss Earhart was to follow the Pan American Airways route to Natal, Brazil, from there to attempt a South Atlantic crossing to Dakar in Africa. From Dakar she planned a direct flight to Aden on the Gulf of Persia, thence to Karachi, India, Port Darwin, Australia, and Lae, New Guinea. From New Guinea she mapped a course across the Pacific in three hops—to Howland Island, Honolulu and Oakland, Cal.

ROOSEVELT HITS 'TAX DODGERS'

URGES CURB ON WEALTHY EVADERS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 1—President Roosevelt sent a message to Congress today excoriating rich tax dodgers and asking Congress to take immediate steps to close loopholes in existing laws by which persons of considerable wealth have been evading taxes.

Most of Mr. Roosevelt's message consisted of a letter from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in which he listed a dozen devices which wealthy individuals and corporations have employed to escape payment of taxes which Congress intended to impose.

"DECENCY" AT STAKE

This avoidance of taxes, Mr. Roosevelt conceded, may be legal in the narrow sense, but he contended it is not moral, and he thought it was up to Congress to do something about it.

"In this immediate problem," he said, "The decency of American morals is involved.

"The example of successful tax dodging by a minority of very rich individuals breeds efforts by other people to dodge other laws as well as tax laws.

"I am confident that the Congress will wish to enact legislation at this session specifically and exclusively aimed at making the present tax structure evasion-proof.

"I am confident also that the Congress will give to the Treasury all authority necessary to expand and complete the present preliminary investigation, including, of course, full authority to summon witnesses and compel their testimony.

"The ramifications and the

An eighteen-year-old boy was drowned, and several persons prostrated, as New England sweltered today under the second consecutive day of blistering heat.

TRIES TO AID PAL

His companion, Fred Hubbard, 17, of 721 Hyde Park avenue, Roslindale, who had already reached shore, noticed Donnarumma was in difficulty and plunged in after him.

Reaching the struggling boy's side, young Hubbard grasped him and started to swim for shore, when he was caught in a "death" grip by the semi-conscious Donnarumma.

The two boys sank twice, Hubbard breaking the other's grip while under water the second time.

Rising to the surface, Hubbard swam about for a few minutes attempting to locate his companion. Finally he was compelled to head for shore, exhausted.

Donnarumma's body was recovered by Fred Cannon, Metropolitan Commission foreman. Attempts by lifeguards to revive him failed.

SEVERAL PROSTRATED

Charles P. Loring, 74, of Lincoln avenue, Wollaston, and Francis Mascrocchi, 34, of Commercial street, were treated for heat prostration at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

Loring dropped to the pavement in State street. Mascrocchi was stricken in Suffolk Courthouse.

James Doherty, of Norfolk street, Dorchester, was overcome by heat while working on a Dorchester WPA project. He was treated at City Hospital and released.

Meanwhile, relief, in the form of showers was predicted by Weather Forecaster Harold Noyes.

"Moderate thunder showers late this afternoon or night, with Wednesday generally fair and much cooler," was Forecaster Harold Noyes' prediction.

U. S. IN MOVE TO HALT NEW NAZI WAR

War Bulletins

Rome, June 1 (AP)—Italian warships have been ordered to prevent Russian vessels from supplying war materials to the Spanish government, authoritative sources disclosed tonight.

London, June 1 (AP)—The biggest warship in the world, Britain's H.M.S. Hood, sailed today for Gibralta to resume her patrol duties near Spain.

By ROBERT G. NIXON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 1—The United States government today asked Germany to keep the peace in troubled Europe.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in a personal conversation with German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff, threw the moral weight of the American government behind efforts to prevent the outbreak of war in the Germano-Spanish crisis.

Hull expressed the earnest hope that the German government might find a way of peaceful adjustment of the Deutschland bombing which brought swift Nazi retaliation against the Spanish loyalist government in the bombardment of Almeria.

IN SECRET PARLEY

The request was made in a dramatic setting, International News Service learned. After a day of worry over the new European crisis and a session of many hours with his subordinates in the State Department, Hull quietly went to a suite in a local hotel.

There he personally telephoned the German ambassador. Dieckhoff hurried to Hull's apartment and they chatted quietly and informally for nearly an hour, reviewing the entire crisis.

Hull reminded Dieckhoff that it

KIRK CHARGES GRAFT IN STATE POLICE

Hurling of charges and counter-charges by members of the State police reached a climax today when Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk made a detailed report to Governor Hurley of alleged graft in the police ranks.

Leading items in Commissioner Kirk's report were:

1—That pressure was applied to get $1000 worth of free ice cream for the Lunenburg substation and that the "victim" was not raided for a slot-machine until he cut down on the free refreshments.

NAMES THREE OFFICERS

2—That the clerk of the Ayer court was offered $100 a week if he would supply "tips" on raids to a state policeman who was going to open a horse race bookie room.

3—That a check was kept on the way legislators voted on a bill for civil service for state officers, and that those who voted wrong were apparently marked for "punishment," the others for "favors."

4—That Lieutenant Harry L. Avery failed to act against those involved in the various allegations.

Besides naming Lieutenant Avery, who has resigned, Commissioner Kirk's report also named Corporal Robert Thompson, who resigned, and Trooper Leo J. Dumas, a prospective bridegroom, who is under suspension.

Commissioner Kirk stated that both Avery and Thompson apparently owed their rise from the ranks to outside influences.

HURLEY REFUSES COMMENT

The report by the commissioner, involving his own department, was made as an answer to broadsides fired at him by Thompson and others since the recent resignations.

Governor Hurley received it from Commissioner Kirk personally at the Governor's home in Cambridge and declined to comment. The commissioner gave it out to the press.

Further disclosures, possibly bringing to light a wide split between two factions of the state police, are still to be made, according to several members of the Legislature who read the report at the State House this afternoon.

The state police head informed the Governor that, under the law he (Kirk) had authority to take whatever action he deemed necessary for the proper conduct of his own department.

TELLS OF ICE CREAM

KNICKERBOCKER SAYS ENGLAND IN PEACE ROLE

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

(World Copyright, 1937. Reproduction in Whole or in Part Strictly Prohibited)

London, June 1—After an exchange of three sharp blows, Europe's battling nations drew off today and, pointing to the other fellow's injuries, declared that would be all for the present.

They do not want war, but like quarelling men who have just struck each other, yet don't want to fight, they have backed away crying:

"That will teach you"

Now they are looking for someone to hold them and England, as usual, has accepted the job.

During the last 48 hours' crisis between Germany, Italy and Rebel Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Spain, on the one hand, and Red Spain backed by France and Russia on the other, nearly 100 have been killed and 200 wounded, which is more bloodshed than in all the crises which disturbed Europe in the 43 years from 1871 to 1914.

A mere fraction of this violence would have precipitated war in the period previous to 1914. Yet today, though war is always possible and Europe's nerves are still jittery, war is unlikely, despite the succession of brutal atacks which have set a record even for this turbulent decade.

The Spanish Reds struck first. Their warplanes, crashing bombs upon the decks of the proud German pocket battleship Deutschland Saturday afternoon in Ibiza harbar, killed 24 and wounded 82—and that was "for Guernica," where German war planes had killed 800.

OTHER "OUTRAGES"

Twenty-four hours later came a stealthy blow from an unknown submarine, reported Italian, torpedoing the Red Spanish liner Ciudad de Barcelona and drowning 50. Another 12 hours later, Germany struck, and with sister ships of the Deutschland pounded the Red Spanish port of Almeria until 19 were dead and 55 wounded.

France and Russia looked on, indignantly restraining their rage. Here was material for war on a continental scale. For if Germany and Italy continued open warfare upon Red Spain, France and Russia, to protect themselves against the menace of a Nazi-Fascist Spain, would have to act as they have threatened to do in the past.

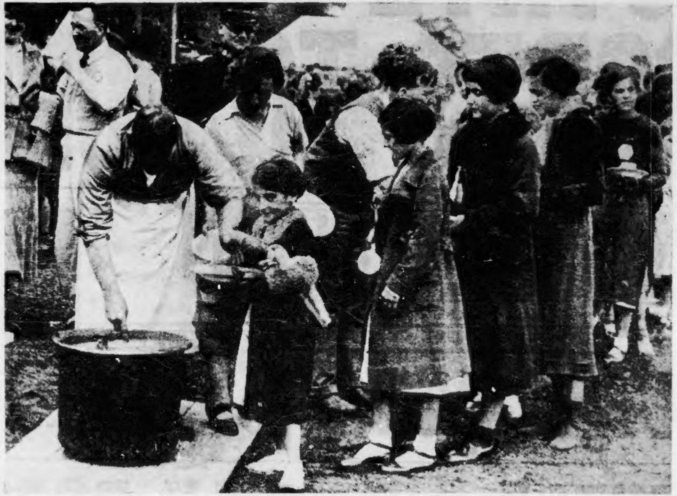
England, leaping into the breach, implores both sides to halt. Germany, half grateful for restraint and wholly desirous of winning England's support, declares she will halt if the enemy is restrained.

To attest to their desire to avoid an ultimate trial of strength with their potential enemies, Germany and Italy even admitted that they do not intend at this moment completely to repudiate the agreement not to intervene in Spain, but that they won't participate on the non-intervention committee until security of their patrol vessels is guaranteed.

So far, the chief gainer from the unhappy events has been Italy, because now she has some difficulty in persuading Germany to stay with her in the Spanish adventure until she could pull out gracefully.

England, sweating at her job of umpire and peacemaker, today reproves both Germany and Red Spain, seeking above all to mollify the excitement until the current crisis is past, but shows Germany's and Italy's protests against Red Spain are justified.

Human Flotsam on Tide of War



Free from terror of war for the first time in many weeks, these Basque children from Bilbao, Spain, are given dinner at Southampton England. They are among the 4000 youngsters evacuated from the Bilbao area. They are living in a huge tent city, near Southampton.

U. S. Asks Germany to Avert War

is the fixed policy of the American government to pursue its own separate and independent course with respect to situations arising in and about Spain. He told Dieckhoff it is this nation's "constant and fervent hope" that the Spanish civil war can be quickly terminated, the slaughter ended, and that no further threat to world peace may arise.

SPAIN'S ENVOY PROTESTS

In respnse Dieckhoff, it was learned, thanked Hull for America's interest in peace and told him that Germany, too, is trying to prevent war.

Dieckhoff said the Almeria bombardment was in what was felt just retaliation for an unwarranted act of piracy against the German govement, but that his government was prepared to conclude the situation with that single reprisal.

Dieckhoff's call upon Hull was followed by a visit from Don Fernando de Los Rios, Spanish ambassador, who lodged a vigorous protest with the United States government against the bombing of Almeria. De Los Rios asked for no action by this government but said he was protesting in the name of "civilization" against "an act of barbarity."

Huge Amada Hems Spain In as War Fear Spreads

London, June 1 (AP)—An international fleet of untold strength patrolled the troubled waters of Spain today as chancelleries searched for a peaceful settlement of Berlin's and Valencia's grievances.

The actual size of what may be one of the most formidable armadas in history was veiled in secrecy. But it was known that the great European sea powers—Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany—were prepared for any developments.

Meanwhile, Great Britain joined Germany and Italy in protesting Spanish government violence against nertual shipping—apparently as a measure to bolster Europe's peace. The British stand, well-informed sources believed, was calculated to give reassurance to Berlin and Rome that their demands against the Spanish government were justified.

BY FORCE OF ARMS

At the same time it was intended to obtain safety of shipping through the creation by the Spanish government of safety zones for neutral warships. British spokesmen reiterated the government was not taking sides but was striving only to reform the framework of the international "hands off Spain" committee, now weakened by Italian and German withdrawals.

It was stated authoritatively that Britain might face the task of proposing that the non-intervention committee guarantee by force of arms that the Spaniards will keep hands off foreign shipping.

This would bean turning the non-intervention sea patrol of Spain, which now merely reports violations of a ban on foreign arms and men back to member governments, into sort of an international navy empowered to use force to keep the Spanish war from spreading.

This might be the only way to wood Germany and Italy back into the fold.

FAVOR SAFETY ZONE

The British portest today was based on an attack on the British flotilla leader, H. M. S. Hardy, of Palma Mallorca on Hay 26. The foreign office said the ship was almost hit by aerial bombs.

The British charge d'affaires at Valencia delivered the protest and received from the Spanish government apparent assurances of its readiness to establish desired "safety zone" for neutral warships off Palma.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden urged foreign envoys to regard the need for restraint in the new Spanish-European crisis.

Informed quarters quickly stated that, while the government deplored such attacks as the Spanish government's aerial bombing of the German pocket battleship Deutschland, there was no thought of condoning the Reich's retaliatory bombardment if Almeria, on the Spanish coast.

HITLER SENDS MORE SHIPS

Official sources in Berli ngave only meager information concerning the German naval reinforcements that were known to have been ordered into Spanish waters after Spanish government airplanes bombed the German pocket battleship Deutschland in Ibiza Harbor Saturday, killing 25 of her crew and precipitating yesterday's retaliatory bombardment of Almeria.

A number of ships left the Kiel, ermany, base yesterday. Today it was announced only that the cruiser Leipzig had departed for Spain. It was believed, in some quarters, that the others were bound for a regular training course in the Baltic sea.

Official secrecy also hid the exact strength of German naval concentrations already off the Spanish coast. It was believed that the pocket battleships Deutschland and Admiral Scheer still were in the Mediterranean with the second torpedo boat flotilla, consisting of about six war vessels and a number of auxiliary ships.

FRENCH SHIPS READY

France was adequately prepared for any eventualities. Her Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets had steam up to sail from Brest today for combined maneuvers on the high seas. Her ships in the international control fleet, however, will remain at their stations off Spain. Sixteen French destroyers, two cruisers and two sloops are assigned to the neutrality fleet.

As far as could be learned, the Italian ships of the non-intervention fleet still maintained their vigil off the northeast coast of Spain from the French frontier on the Mediterranean to Cape Cropesa. The squadron includes the light cruiser Quatro, several destroyers and two auxiliary ships.

The Italian naval base at Maddalena, on the Mediterranean island of Sardinia, made it possible for [illegible] to maintain its strong force [illegible] readiness within easy distance of Spanish waters.

A number of heavy cruisers as well as submarines, were reported fueled and prepared to leave on a moment's notice.

Thirteen British men-of-war, including the battleship Royal Oak, continued to patrol the Spanish coast from Gibraltar to the French border, while seven others roamed the Basque coast from France to Portugal. Both flotillas were detailed to the neutrality fleet.

Duce in War Council; Punitive Move Hinted

Rome, June 1 (AP)—Premier Benito Mussolini returned to Rome today at the controls of a tri-motored plane and arranged to discuss Italy's part in the grave Spanish situation with Marshal Werner Von Blomberg, German War Minister.

Il Duce, returning from a holiday, will see Von Blomberg, who likewise arrived by plane, early tomorrow afternoon.

War Crisis Bulletins

Munguia, Spain, June 1 (INS)—Five hundred Basque soldiers were killed and hundreds were wounded when they attacked Mount San Pedro on the Basque front, Insurgent authorities asserted today.

The fighting lasted for nearly three hours. The Basque were claimed to have been "massacred" by machine gun bullets.

Tarragona, Spain, June 1 (AP)—A handful of wounded sailors made their way into this port today to relate that a "large submarine" had torn their 214-ton sailboat to pieces with 20 shots off Cambrils. One man of the crew of eight of the ship, the Granada, was killed. The others, all wounded, reached here by lifeboat.

Berlin, June 1 (INS)—The German cruiser Leipsiz was ordered to proceed to Spanish waters today. Other units of the Nazi fleet will follow shortly.

3 U. S. CITIZENS WOUNDED BY NAZI SHELLS

By ALKEOS ANGELOPULOUS

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Almeria, Spain, June 1—Three Americans engaged in relief work were reported among the 200 residents wounded in the bombardment of this ancient city by German warships.

Authorities counted the known dead at upwards of 70. More than 100 lay missing under tons of brick and mortar debris and it was believed most of them were dead.

The civil governor of Almeria told this correspondent that the three Americans were among the scores of wounded crowding Almeria's hospitals.

They were said to have been gravely injured by flying shrapnel from some of the 300 huge naval shells that exploded in this southeastern seaport during the 90-minute bombardment.

RELIEF WORKERS

The civil governor said he could not ascertain the names of the Americans, but that they had been in Almeria doing relief work.

Both the dead and wounded include many women and children, government authorities said. The furious bombardment was carried out by five German warships—the 10,000-ton pocket battleship Admiral Scheer convoyed by four Nazi destroyers.

The bombardment—first open naval attack on any Spanish city by German ships—lasted an hour and a half.

When the shelling ceased and the Nazi ships withdrew under a smoke-screen, a gigantic exodus from Almeria began. All day and far into the night, hundreds of men, women and children fled in panic to the surrounding countryside. They feared new German bombardments.

Scenes of wholesale death and widespread horror were graphically depicted by some of Almeria's citizens who were caught in the thick of the bombardment, but managed to escape with their lives.

UNLEASH THEIR DEATH

When they saw no airplanes overhead, they stampeded to the docks along the waterfront not suspecting what was in store for them.

Sleepy-eyed residents, rushing from their beds at the warning, were surprised to find there was no air raid, said the official. Many of them rushed to the docks and piers, not suspecting the German vessels they saw in the distance would open fire.

Parents Mourn Son, Daughter Killed

Springfield, June 1—Two years to the day after her brother died by drowning, Mary Ratelle, five, of Bridge street, was killed when she ran in front of a truck on Dwight street.

When the accident happened the parents of the girl were decorating the grave of her brother. Mary was on her way to see the Memorial Day parade.

Keep Out of Spain!

Hostile acts and reprisals in Spain may or may not bring on a general war.

All the world hopes they will not, and they probably will not.

If they do, however, EUROPE will reap the bloody harvest of its tragic folly.

More than ever, Americans must realize it is the part of wisdom to STAY OUT OF SPAIN.

This is a time for MINDING OUR OWN BUSINESS as we have never minded it before.

Americans have no business in Spain.

They will only get into trouble there, and get their country into trouble.

Whatever crimes are committed there, we have no obligation to avenge them.

American crackpots are coming back from Spain dripping exhortations to America to DO SOMETHING.

Some of them want us to fight on one side, some on the other.

GIFTS 'Bombard' DUKE

BRITISH PLANES DROP PRESENTS

Monts, France, June 1 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor and Wallis Warfield were bombarded from the air with wedding gifts today.

The "bombers," identified as British Royal Airforce planes, dropped the presents by parachute just before tea time. The duke received the packages at the Chateau de Cande as though he were expecting them.

What the packages contained and who sent them were not known.

(The Air Ministry in London said identifying symbols on the planes apparently were not those of Royal Airforce craft.)

News Ban Seen Snub Against Duke

By KENNETH T. DOWNS

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

Monts, France, June 1—With their wedding only two days away, the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield scented today what they believe to be another hostile maneuver against them in Britain.

Word reached them at the Chateau de Cande that the English press, by mutual agreement, is again "soft-pedaling" news concerning them and their forthcoming marriage.

While they do not seek publicity, it was learned, they believe the mutual agreement is the result of motives hostile to them.

EXPRESS CARRIES NEWS

Except in the London Daily Express, which is prominently displaying stories about them, and has severely criticized the "unfair" way the duke is being treated, hardly a line about them has appeared in the English newspapers for three days, the duke and his future duchess were informed.

The conservative Times of London, they were informed, flashed a "red light" Saturday when it observed:

"The Duke of Windsor should be granted privacy . . . there is neither public gain nor personal service in publicity heightened by unnecessary controversy."

The papers reacted instantly, and though an army of English reporters is here, almost nothing has been printed. All their "exclusive" stories have been spiked.

According to information here, an agreement has been reached whereby the English papers—with the exception of the Daily Express—will print little about the wedding June 3 except a "communique" issued by a British press association.

The Daily Express, on the other hand, is expected to send Lord Castle-Ross, its famed gossip columnist, here by airplane, and he is expected to spur the efforts of the Express' already large staff of writers, sob-sisters and photographers on the scene.

It is believed possible the stand taken by the express may cause the other papers to alter their attitude regarding "coverage" of the wedding Thursday, but meanwhile, according to information here, the agreement among the London papers stands.

The ceremony, it was learned, will take place at 11:30 a. m. on Thursday (6:30 a. m. E. D. T.) instead of at noon as previously planned. The ring that will be used bears a brief inscription, the nature of which has not been disclosed.

Prefect Vernet of the Monts district issued an order forbidding airplanes to fly over the estate while the wedding is in progress.

Girls, Strip Art Barred by British

Southampton, Eng., June 1 (INS)—Two lovely blonde New York show-girls were plenty mad today—and the object of their wrath was staid unyielding British officialdom.

They arrived aboard the Queen Mary to initiate the British into the art of the strip tease—at least, that was their idea. But the British officials had ideas of their own.

On top of that, the girls, Joyce Stanton and Alice Delmar, neglected to buy steamship tickets, so they were held aboard ship to be shipped back home at the expense of their parents.

When the vessel sailed from New York, they simply ignored the "all ashore," call, they explained.

Vet Gets 2 Years For Polygamy

MRS. ELIZABETH NICHOLS CLARK
Heard Husband Sentenced

Clark, Wife No. 2, Weep As Sentence Is Given

A husband and wife were both in tears, over the breaking up of two homes today, as Everett Milton Clark, 37, of Beacon street, Somerville, a World War veteran, was sentenced to two years in jail for polygamy.

Of three wives that Clark is alleged to have had, only one was in court—Mrs. Elizabeth Nichols-Clark of South street, Roslindale, who brought the charge against him.

Before Judge Sadie Lipner Shulman, in Dorchester court, the Roslindale woman tearfully told of marrying Clark in 1930 and leaving him three years later when she discovered he had married in Wales, in 1925.

Clark had two children by his first wife and one by his second—a girl now five years old.

"For 19 months after we separated, I couldn't locate him to make him pay for the support of our baby," said Mrs. Clark, No. 2.

"For a year and a half he has sent me $5 a week. When I went to serve annulment papers I found he was married again."

Clark had partially straightened out his marriage tangle by getting a divorce from wife No. 1, in 1933. Then he tangled it up again by marrying Miss Adelaide Louise Alberico of Cambridge, last July.

Pleading guilty, Clark appealed to Judge Shulman, saying:

"We are very happy together now, and have a nice home. I divorced my first wife and I thought my second wife had obtained an annulment. I'd hate to have my home in Somerville broken up."

When sentenced to jail, he burst into tears. His second wife was already crying.

Clark was given until June 10 to appeal and on that date he will be re-sentenced. Meanwhile bail was set at $3000 and he began trying to arrange for his release under this bond. He is employed as a chef.

Clark's wife No. 2 is a stepdaughter of Patrolman Fred Perry of Roxbury Crossing division. She was the only one of the wives in court.

BABY 'Dies' Second TIME

FIRST SAVED BY MORTICIAN

Sanford, Me., June 1—For the second time within 24 hours, the baby son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lamontagne "died" today.

Pronounced dead at birth the child was turned over to an undertaker Lionel LaFrance who upon lifting the blanket which formed its shroud, was startled to discover signs of life.

"The baby seemed to be breathing and so I shook the little body vigorously and the child began to cry," said LaFrance.

Amazed and delighted, Mrs. Lamontagne received the baby in her arms. The doctor was called again and for more than ten hours the five-pound boy lived.

Then he began to fail again and his breathing slowly stopped.

"DEAD" WHEN BORN

The baby, third child and third son of the Lamontagnes, was born at 2 a. m. The doctors said the child was already dead when it was born.

LaFrance was called by the baby's father several hours later and it was noon when he arrived with his embalming kit.

The baby had then been "dead" under its blanket for ten hours.

"I was very greatly startled when I saw it was alive," said the undertaker. "After I shook it and it started to cry, it began to breathe deeply.

"I never had a case like this before and never heard of one, but I don't want another. It was too much of a shock. I was just going to go to work to prepare the body for burial.

DOCTOR SURPRISED

"The doctor was very much surprised when we called him and told him to come right over because the baby was living, but he couldn't explain it."

It was believed here that the warmth of the blanket may have been the means of reviving the child, livening up a tiny spark of life and starting the child's breathing.

MARY LOUISE BARTLETT CAROLYN PARKER

That ogre, the "General," has arrived to claim all their time and attention for he holds their scholastic fate in his hands.

The "General" is the nickname for the comprehensive examination which covers most of the work a student has done in her major subject since she entered.

That is why you'll find the girls poring over Shakespeare and rhetoric, Plutarch and history. And that explains why they have banned dates, dances, golfing and canoeing.

Much depends on their present task. It is no cinch to go over four years of work. Ask any senior. If she flunks "the general," she loses her chance to get her sheepskin along with the rest of her class. She can take it over again next year, but that's small consolation.

Two outstanding seniors who are getting in their licks at study are Mary Louise Bartlett of Providence, and Carolyn Parker of Concord, N. H. They live in Olive Davis Hall and are room-mates.

However, it'll all be over next Friday. The grind will last from four to seven hours.

'WEALTHY TAX DODGERS' ASSAILED BY PRESIDENT

geographical scope of a complete investigation make it necessary to utilize every power of government which can contribute to the the end desired."

The President also took occasion to pay his respects to the legal profession, which specializes in tax matters, and which almost as a unit has expressed its opposition to his plan for reorganization of the Supreme Court.

"It is a matter of deep regret," he said, "that lawyers of high standing at the bar not only have advised, and are advising their clients to utilize tax avoidance devices, but are actively using these devices in their own personal affairs. We hear too often from lawyers, as well as from their clients, the sentiment, 'It is all right to do it if you can get away with it.'"

CITES HOLMES' WORDS

Again, as in a number of former messages, the President quoted from the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, whose dissenting opinions on the Supreme bench constitute a brilliant chapter in American jurisprudence. This time he quoted Justice Holmes as saying:

"Taxes are what we pay for civilized society."

There are three classifications of tax avoidance, the President said, those that have the appearance of legality, others on the borderline of legality, and still others which are plainly contrary to even the letter of the law.

"All are alike," he said, "in that they are definitely contrary to the spirit of the law. All are alike in that they represent a determined effort on the part of those who use them to dodge the payment of taxes which Congress based on ability to pay. All are alike in that failure to pay results in shifting the tax load to the shoulders of others less able to pay, and in mulcting the Treasury of the government's just due."

Mr. Roosevelt intimated that the failure of Treasury estimates to come up to expectations this year—even though income tax receipts were 70 per cent higher than last year—was due to the skill of the lawyers in finding ways for their clients to beat the spirit of the law.

He did not, however, mention those decisions by the Supreme Court which have held that state and municipal incomes are not subject to federal tax, and that federal incomes are not subject to state taxes—a convenient ruling by which several millions of persons manage to escape the taxes to which the ordinary citizen is liable.

The letter from Secretary Morgenthau which Mr. Roosevelt incorporated enumerated various devices by which corporate and personal wealth evade taxes.

After reciting numerous examples of tax avoidance or evasion, the President said:

"A feeling of indignation on reading this letter will, I am confident, be yours, as it was mine.

". . . We are trying harder than ever before to relieve suffering and want, to protect the weak, to curb avarice, to prevent booms and depressions—and to balance the budget. Taxation necessary to these ends is the foundation of sound governmental finance. 'Clever little schemes' are not admirable when they undermine the foundations of society.

"The three great branches of the government have a joint concern in this situation. First, it is the duty of the Congress to remove new loopholes devised by attorneys for clients willing to take an unethical advantage of society and their own government.

"Second, it is the duty of the executive branch of the government to collect taxes, to investigate fully all questionable cases, to prosecute where wrong has been done, and to make recommendations for closing loopholes.

DUTY OF COURTS

"Third, it is the duty of the courts to give full consideration to the intent of the Congress in passing tax laws and to give full consideration to all evidence which points to an objective of evasion on the part of the taxpayer.

"Very definitely the issue immediately before us is the single one relating to the evasion or unethical avoidance of existing laws. That should be kept clearly in mind by the Congress and the public.

"But it seems to me that the first duty of the Congress is to empower the government to stop these evil practices, and that legislation to this end should not be confused with legislation to revise tax schedules. That is a wholly different subject.

"In regard to that subject, I have already suggested to the Congress that at this session there should be no new taxes and no changes of rates. And I have indicated to the Congress that the Treasury will be prepared by next November to present to the appropriate committees information on the basis of which the Congress may, if it chooses, undertake revisions of the tax structure."

Kirk Lays 'Graft' to Police

Reports to Hurley on "Free Ice Cream"

"On Wednesday, May 26," he stated, "I had an interview with a Mr. Harold Harley of Lunenberg.

"Mr. Harley stated in substance that he had been since 1933 manager of the Oliver Hill stand, located approximately 400 feet from the State Police substation in Lunenburg, commanded by Corporal Thompson; that for several years it had been the practice, with the approval of one of the owners of Clover Hill Farm, to furnish ice cream gratuitously to the men quartered in that station.

"He said that when he became manager he kept a record of the amounts given and the total amount of the ice cream given after he became manager was in excess of $1000.

HINT ABOUT "FIXING"

"Also that since Corporal Thompson was restored as substation commander, the requests for ice cream for the men of the Lunenburg station had increased in both frequency and amount.

"That he consulted one of his employers, who instructed him that the amount given should be restricted to two quarts a day.

"That a civilian employe at the Lunenburg station came to the stand and asked Mr. Harley for three quarts of ice cream for the men at the station.

"That he informed the man that his orders were to give only two quarts per day, and that the reply was: "How do you expect to have things fixed if you don't give us the ice cream we want?"

"That the requests for ice cream thereupon ceased, but that within two weeks Corporal Thompson and Patrolman Dumas raided the stand and took out a pin-ball machine which was on the premises.

FINED FOR GAMING

"That the men stationed in Lunenburg had known for some time that the machine was there.

"That on the same day, the civilian employe above referred to said to Harley: 'See what happened because we did not get the ice cream.'

"That Harley was thereafter tried and found guilty of maintaining a gaming nuisance.

"It is a fact that the raid was conducted by Corporal Thompson and Patrolman Dumas without a search warrant.

"Mr. Harley stated that Chief Chester Page of the Lunenburg police told him Corporal Thompson had inquired of him if Harley drove a machine, implying thereby, in the opinion of Chief Page, that he sought further reprisal against Harley.

"Mr. Harley said the truck drivers of the Clover Hill Farm were fearful of retaliation by Thompson."

In reporting on the alleged offer of a bribe to Richard T. Lilly, clerk of the Ayer district court, Commissioner Kirk presented a stenographic record of his interview with Lilly.

COURT CLERK'S STORY

According to this record, Lilly told him:

"Some time in the spring of 1935, in mid-afternoon while at my office in the Barry building at Ayer, Patrolman Dumas of the state police was engaged in conversation with me and, at some period during the conversation, he made the remark that I was foolish to be bothered with trying to eke out a living in the manner I was pursuing; that, in substance, there were greater sums to be had with less effort.

THOUGHT OF RESIGNING

"Whereupon, on inquiry by me as to the place or circumstances under which such could be had, he replied that Corporal Thompson, who was at that time recuperating from an operation in the city of Fitchburg, was thinking of resigning from the state police and going into the bookie business, and that a substantial sum might be had by me if information could be given as to the occurrence of raids, or the issuance of warrants."

Lilly was further quoted as saying he told Lieutenant Avery of his alleged conversation with Dumas, and also told the lieutenant that neither he nor the judge of his court had any confidence in Thompson or Dumas.

Much to his surprise, he said, Thompson was later moved into his district, being given command of the Lunenburg sub-station, while Dumas was transferred to that substation from the Holden headquarters of Troop C.

Lilly said he related the incident to Lieutenant Avery after Corporal Pollard, then in command in the district, came to him for a warrant for a raid on a bookie place reported to Pollard by Thompson. The warrant was issued but the bookie place was found closed. Lilly said he decided then he should report the whole matter to protect himself.

Julia was picked up today by a patrolman at Harvard and Norfolk streets, Cambridge. Taken to the Central police station, she admitted being a runaway, said she was very hungry and could she "please have something to eat."

She was returned to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hardiman, of 2 Lothrop street, Brighton.

DECELLES SAYS COUNT 'DUMMY' FOR COHEN

Count Luigi Castelli was elected second president of the defunct Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company only as "a dummy" for Frank Cohen of New York, Insurance Commissioner DeCelles charged at the State House today.

"He was to be the go-between in the interlocking directorate of the Boston company and the New York organization," DeCelles told the special commission probing affairs of the Commonwealth.

Castelli, insisted the witness, was a dreamer with grandiose ideas who had visions of a million and a half dollar business in 1937 while the Commonwealth was unable to conduct the business it had in 1936.

"His slogan was 'Come one, come all and insure with us!'" DeCelles said of Castelli.

PROBLEM OF SELECTION

The commissioner said he then told Nathan Fink, special counsel retained to reorganize the Commonwealth, that the problem to be solved was not one of volume, but of selection.

"I told Fink that Castelli was not legally elected president by the board of directors and should be replaced by a Boston man. That was when they began to approach Boston men to take the place.

One of the commissioners suddenly broke in and asked the witness:

"Were you approached to become president of the company?"

"Emphatically no!" was DeCelles' response.

A vice-president of a large Boston bank was asked to take the job, and later a former bank examiner, DeCelles continued, but neither would take the post.

At this point the commissioner said that he wanted to put on record the fact that Attorney Fink "was not a personal friend."

"I had only a nodding acquaintance with him, such as I have with 500 other Boston lawyers," he said. "I never met him in my life until a year ago, when he came to my office in connection with another case.

"I offer this testimony because of certain implications that appear in the testimony of other witnesses. I did not meet him again until November 4 (1936).

DENIES PROMISE

"I never gave Fink or anyone else the intimation that I would withhold action against the Commonwealth if I found the company to be insolvent or dangerous to run."

DeCelles also stressed that Fink "tried to sell Cohen to me, but I frankly told him that I didn't trust Cohen."

Prior to this the witness had told the commission that none of the officers had any reason to be "surprised"—as some have testified—when the state insurance division closed down the Commonwealth.

"I indicated to them that there was only one way in which I could allow the Commonwealth to go on," he testified.

"Much depended on the final report of Miss Katherine O'Leary (insurance division examiner). I told them the impaired capital must be made up either by a gift or by a stock assessment.

WARNED OF COHEN

"I told them that the influence of Frank Cohen (New York backer) must be removed, that an honest and competent board of directors must be elected and that the company must be set up on a business organization plan."

DeCelles said that as far as "surprise" being concerned he had no reason to go to the officers of the Commonwealth and acquaint them with his plans.

Immediately preceding the filing of the receivership petition which closed the company, DeCelles said examinations by Miss O'Leary showed that the Commonwealth company's business "was steadily getting worse."

"I consulted with the attorney-general and we had determined to take the necessary legal steps to put the company into liquidation," DeCelles testified.

"A tentative bill was drawn up on December 10 by the attorney-general's department. That bill was to be filed with the supreme court if Miss O'Leary's subsequent examinations warranted the action. Her written report was completed at 10 a. m. on the morning of December 14.

"I was in the supreme court on the rate case hearing and at the noon recess Assistant Attorney-General James J. Ronan, Miss O'Leary and myself went into Judge Lummus' private chambers and urged that immediate action be taken against the company.

"The action was taken on December 14 because Judge Lummus had previously announced that he would decide one way or the other on a previous stockholder's suit on the 15th."

In past testimony it has been asserted by several of the Commonwealth's officials that DeCelles acted precipitately against the company within 24 hours after assuring them that they could continue in business.

DeCelles was just as vehement in denying that any action of his ever brought on a "run" or forced the Commonwealth into insolvency.

He said that he had been blamed for publication of statements attributed to him bringing on a "run" of claims.

"I wasn't responsible for that," he asserted. "I had no control over these reports."

$3000 HOLDUP BY GUNMEN IN CAMBRIDGE

Striking for the second time in less than a week, two armed bandits today broke into the Gateway restaurant on Fresh Pond avenue, Cambridge, and got away with the week-end receipts totalling $3000.

Just one week ago bandits entered the same establishment and, after herding guests and employes into one corner, cleaned out the cash drawer of about $300.

Police, still on the trail of the three men who held up the restaurant last week, believe the latest foray was planned by the same mob.

BOUND WITH WIRE

The two armed bandits, one carrying a blue-steel revolver, and the other fondling a sawed-off shotgun, broke through a side window, surprised the watchman as he made his rounds and bound him with wire coil.

After overpowering the watchman, 59-year-old Arthur Waite, of Lakeview avenue, Cambridge, the men told him to "keep his mouth shut" if he knew what was good for him.

They asked him if anyone else was on the premises, and when he told them his boss, Manager Frank J. Kenney, was sleeping on a cot in an upstairs room, they took off his shoes, and pressing both guns into his back, made him creep softly up the stairs.

Breaking into the room where Kenney was sleeping the men pressed their guns into his side and awakened him.

"What's the combination?" one of them asked.

"I don't know," Kenney is alleged to have replied.

One look at the sawed-off gun and the eyes peering over the sights convinced Kenney that the men weren't fooling. He told them the combination.

TRIES MISLEADING

The man with the shotgun ordered Kenney and Waite to start for the safe. Kenney, seeking to mislead the robbers, told police he led them into an outer room by way of the ladies' room.

But evidently they had been in the place before, for as Kenney started for the back stair case, they halted him and, turning him around, threatened to "blast his head off" if he didn't quit stalling."

When the men reached the place where the wall safe is secreted, the bandits reached into a check room and, extracting coat hangers, coiled the wire about the wrists and feet of the manager and watchman before cleaning out the till.

Leaving both men trussed up while they counted the money, the two bandits took a last look at the bonds and tossed both Waite and Kenney into a side stockroom, locking the door from the outside before fleeing.

Before they left though, they issued a warning to both men to lie still and not attempt any outcry until they had departed.

Kenney, tugging at his bonds, managed to free his hands a short time after the bandits had left. He climbed over the transom, opened the door and released Waite.

Both men dashed down the stairs to the front dining hall where they discovered the phones had been ripped from the walls. Kenney went into the kitchen and used a phone booth to call police.

ABANDONED CAR

A half hour after the robbery, police found an abandoned coupe, motor still running, in Dilboy Field, Somerville.

The car was registered to a Day street, Cambridge, resident, who said it had been stolen. Police believe it was the car in which the robbers escaped.

12 Firemen Lose Fight to Save Baby

Chicago, June 1 (AP)—Twelve firemen lost their 17-hour struggle today to save the life of John Francis Walsh, who was born in Mother Cabrini's Hospital without being able to breathe naturally.

The seven and a half pound baby died after inhalator squads worked in two shifts since yesterday afternoon when the child was born to Mrs. Frank Walsh, 22. The firemen used 16 tanks of oxygen.

New York, June 1 (AP)—Dr. John Wyckoff, 55-year-old dean of the New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College, died in Bellevue Hospital today several hours after he was found unconscious in a laboratory.

Police and hospital authorities were reluctant to divulge details of the case. Dr. Wyckoff's illness first was listed as morphine poisoning, later was attributed to coronary thrombosis.

Detective Patrick Dugan said a note addressed to the dean's wife had been found but declined to disclose its contents.

Damon Runyon

Our American sports stage is presenting a tableau that we think should be attracting more general attention. It is so highly reflective of so many phases of our political and economic life that it justifies the consideration of our heftiest thinkers.

It is what our neighbors, the sports writers, call "the phantom fight." A pugilistic gentleman from Germany, named Herr Max Schmeling, and the $5,000,000 corporation known as Madison Square Garden, are going through all the motions preparing for a fight this week for the heavyweight championship of the world, which everybody is well aware is not coming off.

Herr Max Schmeling has been training seriously, and at considerable expense, up in the Adirondacks. The Garden Corporation, also at considerable expense, has had advertising matter, and tickets printed, and the tickets are on sale at its box offices. The Garden publicity department is gravely sending out the usual publicity circulars.

A number of fighters have been signed up and paired off in the customary preliminaries. The Garden Bowl, over in Long Island City, has been dusted off, and will be lighted up Thursday night, and Herr Max Schmeling is expected to make his appearance there.

BUT NO BRADDOCK

But Herr Max Schmeling knows, and everybody else knows, that the opponent he is announced to fight, Mr. James J. Braddock, heavyweight champion of the world, will not be present. Mr. Braddock is at this time training somewhere out in the Middle West to fight one Joe Louis in Chicago on June 23.

And yet it may transpire that Mr. Braddock's, and Chicago's preparations will eventuate as phantasmal as the Garden's, and Herr Schmeling's. The Garden has gone to law seeking to estop Mr. Braddock's Chicago plans, and the law has not yet rendered a final decision.

It is all a matter of disputed contracts, with which we will not bore the reader. Years ago, when heavyweight championship fights involved comparatively small potatoes in gate receipts, a promoter sent a fight manager a telegram, or a letter, saying he could offer him so much for his fighter to meet so-and-so on such-and-such a date, and if the terms were agreeable to the manager, as they generally were, he responded with a telegram, or a letter, saying okay, and that was all there was to it.

NO LONGER SIMPLE

But when the late George Tex Rickard made the heavyweight championship fights a matter of big business, and got himself incorporated up, with Wall Street associates, and all that sort of thing, lawyers were called in, and since then heavyweight life has not been so simple. It takes a stack of documents two feet high, counting in the seals, to make a heavyweight championship match nowadays, and then it generally turns out to be a rotten fight.

We do not wish to expose any professional secrets but just between us all over here in this somewhat secluded corner, the difference between a heavyweight champion and a fighter of quite ordinary ability has been extremely slight since the lawyers got in. Pugilistic politics has as much to do with making the champion nowadays as fighting ability.

However, it is the hilarity of the present situation, especially with reference to Herr Max Schmeling, that intrigues us. Mr. Braddock at least has an actual opponent training to fight him. And yet Herr Schmeling is doing no more than a lot of the rest of us have been doing all our lives—training for fights that never come off. So let us not laugh too heartily at him.

We find some analogy in Herr Schmeling's efforts and the activities, on a much larger scale, of some distinguished gentlemen over in Europe, including the boss of Herr Schmeling's home country, Herr Hitler. These gentlemen have been going to a lot of expense training for phantom fights, too.

BOXED TO TOP

Herr Schmeling, of course, would be greatly delighted if his opponent would show up, all flesh and blood, Thursday night, allowing that plenty of paying customers would be on hand, too, but the gentlemen in Europe are coming to the conclusion that they will be better off if no one ever appears in the other corner. They are now willing to waive the title of champion of the world, and charge their training expenses off to loss, and let it go at that.

We ran into Professor Will McCarney, a fistic philosopher of the old school the other night. He is the manager, at present, of a persevering heavyweight from New Jersey, Steve Dudas by name.

"About that phantom fight, now," said Professor McCarney. "Sam McQuade, the Garden matchmaker, wanted to sign Dudas up for one of the phantom preliminaries, and asked how much I wanted for Steve for a fight that I know isn't coming off. I figured as long as I wasn't going to get it, anyway, I might as well ask a nice price, so I said a thousand dollars.

"Sam thought awhile and said he couldn't give that much, though I knew I wasn't going to get it even if he gave it to me. He said he would give me seven-fifty that I wouldn't get, and I said, 'Sam, I don't think it's right to cut two-fifty off a sum I'm not going to get. I think if I'm not going to get anything the sum I won't get should be a thousand.'

"But Sam said no. He said he had to be economical about the money he was going to give that I wouldn't get, and the upshot is that the sum I won't get is seven-fifty, so I'm loser two-fifty that I wasn't going to get. It was different in the old days," sighed professor will McCarney. "The money we didn't get was much bigger."

Bob Burns, Radio Comic, Weds Aide

Las Vegas, Nev., June 1 (US)—Bob Burns, drawling screen comedian, raised Hollywood's love score over the Memorial Day holiday to two.

In a brief, quiet ceremony here he was married to his secretary, Harriet Madelia Foster. He gave his age as 45 and she as 28.

They were the second pair of Hollywood notables to take the nuptial vows in a little more than 24 hours. Martha Raye, the rough-house comedian, and Hamilton (Buddy) Westmore, were married here Sunday.

The slow-spoken sage of Van Buren, Ark., and his bride-to-be arrived in a Western Air express plane, received a license and shortly thereafter appeared at the minister's home for the marriage.

Plant Asks Wife Be More Specific

Bridgeport, Conn., June 1 (AP)—Phil Plant, the millionaire sportsman and one-time Broadway playboy, asked his wife through his lawyers today to be more specific in the divorce complaint on which she seeks $1,000,000 alimony.

In a motion filed in Superior Court, the amateur scientist and poultry fancier wants Mrs. Edna Dunham Plant to set forth in detail the "frequency and extent" of his alleged intemperance and the dates and places where he was allegedly intoxicated.

Plant was not present in court when his counsel filed the motion. The matter will be argued Friday, June 11.

Tunnel Vision Peril

W. C. T. U. HEAD BLAMES BEER

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, national president of the Women's Temperance Union, estimated today that a half-teaspoonful of beer would give her "tunnel vision."

"Tunnel vision," she said, "is a visual condition which prevents an automobile driver from seeing anywhere but straight in front of him.

"Two glasses of beer produce it in the average person. That much alcohol also cuts his reaction time in half and confuses traffic light colors.

"Of course, it might take three glasses for some people. Probably, a half teaspoonful would get me. I've never had any.

"It's the drinking driver, not the drunken driver, who's a highway menace," she said. "The drunk's friends won't let him drive. It's the man who's had a few beers or a cocktail who's dangerous."

Mrs. Smith conferred today with delegates arriving from 37 foreign countries or the 16th triennial world W. C. T. U. convention, which begins Thursday.

Police Allowed To Go Coatless

'Gator-Town Moving Day

Jacksonville, Fla., June 1 (AP)—The Jacksonville alligator farm is moving to Daytona Beach.

Every one of the 8000 'gators—some weighing 300 pounds each—has to be tied and put in an individual pen.

The alligators will not need feeding on the boat trip to their new home. 'Gators frequently quit eating for months.

The oldest reptile in the group is "Old Ocklawaha," huge, lazy creature whose age is estimated at 800 years. There are many over a century old.

(2) 1937 · · · New units added. New scientific equipment added. Refinery capacity doubled . . . more than ever world's greatest and most modern refining unit!

In 1933 the flat prairie-land at Texas City, Texas suddenly became alive with industry! Giant cranes tugging at mighty beams and girders! The staccato beat of riveting machines! The world's largest refining unit was being built.

Soon this great refinery was producing New Action American Gas . . . millions of gallons of it! The new refinery yielded the best regular gasoline we could possibly produce. And you recognized it for the value that it was. You bought millions of gallons of it . . . more and more and more!

As a result of your demand for American Gas, the giant cranes returned to the Texas coast. The builders came back! The world's greatest refining unit was no longer big enough to meet the increasing demand for American Gas.

We enlarged the refinery . . . more than doubled its capacity. But we did more than merely increase its size. Scientists, chemists, engineers, had been busy . . . pushing science's fight against crude oil! New, improved equipment was installed. New processes perfected and patented. And as a result of these new processes and equipment we can now build greater value into regular gasoline than was ever possible before!

The new gas is ready—NOW! We named it New Value American Gas—because of its extra built-in values.

It is known as a "sweet" gas—meaning it's pure, free from undesirable odors,— and no added chemicals! You'll say it's a "sweet performer," too—in mileage, economy, smoothness!

VATICAN SENT NAZI PROTEST ON MUNDELEIN

Berlin, June 1 (AP)—The German government today formally accused the Vatican of endangering normal relations with the Nazi Reich by failing to "disavow" the critical speech of George, Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago.

A diplomatic note, handed to the Holy See by Diego Von Bergen, the German ambassador to the Vatican said:

"The Holy See must realize that its unexpected and incomprehensible attitude in this matter, so long as it remains unremedied, has removed the pre-conditions for the normal course of relations between the German government and the Roman Curia."

(The Roma Curia is the body of congregations, tribunals and offices through which the Pope governs the church.)

ENVOY LEAVES

The foreign office said the note did not mean that relations with the Vatican were now being broken off. Von Bergen, it was explained, left Rome on his usual summer vacation. But, it was stated, "he will not go back for some time."

Earlier the German government had made formal representations to the Vatican against Cardinal Mundelein's speech, in which he called Adolf Hitler "an Austrian paper hanger and a poor one, at that" and assailed German trials of priests and lay brothers on immorality charges as "atrocity propaganda."

To those representations, it was announced here, Von Bergen received a verbal reply which later was confirmed in writing. It has not been published, but obviously it was not satisfactory to the Germans.

Today's note said:

"The German government, in the interest of German-Vatican relations, was moved to take steps through its ambassador in the expectation that Vatican circles would be concerned with averting injury to relations between Germany and the Curia as the result of Cardinal Mundelein's attacks.

SURPRISED AT STAND

"The German government assumed as matter of course that the Holy See would disassociate itself from the Cardinal's utterances, rectify them and express its regrets, as has been customary in international intercourse.

"To its sharp surprise and deep astonishment, however, the Holy See deemed it fit to leave the ambassador's representations unanswered on the grounds that the Cardinal's unsubstantiated and untrue allegations constituted, at most, a retort in kind.

"The German government is therefore obliged to conclude that the Holy See leaves the unqualified attacks by one of its highest dignitaries against the German chief of state uncorrected, and in the eyes of the world supports them.

"The Holy See will realize that its unexpected and incomprehensible attitude in this matter, so long as it remains unremedied, has removed the pre-conditions for the normal course of relations between the German government and the Roman Curia.

Women Wounded As Ex-Husband Of 1 Is Hunted

Millis, June 1—After an all night search of the dense woods around Millis and Medway, Robert Ross, alias Rossi, accused of shooting his divorced wife and a woman with whom she was staying, was still at large today as police were combing the entire section.

Mrs. Alice Obst Allard, 57, who was shot in her home where the former Mrs. Ross was staying, is near death at the Milford Hospital with a bullet in her lung.

Ross' former wife, Gertrude Wallace, an attache of the Medfield State Hospital, who was shot in the right arm, is not seriously wounded.

In the belief that Ross fled to the woods, 20 state troopers and local police had the wooded section covered from every angle as officers worked the interior. The shooting took place early yesterday morning.

Ross approached to the Allard home about 3:30 o'clock. His wife, who was week-ending with Mrs. Allard, was sleeping with her on the screened porch of the Allard home.

Mrs. Allard was awakened by the sound of movement near the porch. She saw Ross, who was released from Deer Island March 26, after serving a sentence for beating his wife, walking toward them on the porch with a gun in his hand, she said.

Mrs. Allard screamed and he shot at her but the bullet missed her and struck the wall.

The scream and shot awoke Miss Wallace, and she and Mrs. Allard started to run into the house as Ross fired two more shots, one of which struck Mrs Allard.

Upstairs, Peter Allard, husband of the wounded woman, and Edward Avis, a friend of the family, heard the shots and started down stairs.

They reached the head of the stairs as the women ran up.

Ross, standing at the foot of the stairs, fired two more shots, one of which struck his former wife in the right arm. He then ran out of the house. The two men took the wounded women to the hospital and notified police.

Ross used to live in Medway and in a woods near that town police believed tonight they had him surrounded.

A confusion of identities led to publication in an early edition of today's Boston Evening American of a picture of Peter Allard over the name of Robert N. Ross.

Ross, alias Rossi, is the man sought in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Gertrude Wallace Ross, Medfield State Hospital maid and Mrs. Alice Allard. Allard is the husband of Mrs. Allard, and in no way involved, save that, indirectly, he is a victim. The American regrets the mistake, rectified in later editions.

Travels 7000 Miles To See U. S. Circus

New York, June 1 (AP)—The lure of seeing an American "big top" circus brought Charles B. Cochran, British theatrical producer, here on the first lap of a 7000-mile transatlantic junket.

"I always wanted to see an American circus," Cochran explained today, arriving on the Aquitania for a week's visit.

Mystery "Black Death" Is Probed

Santa Ana, Calif., June 1 (AP)—Physicians pondered today the strange disease which turned the skin of William L. Morrison, 49, black and caused his death.

An autopsy disclosed what surgeons described as a "surprising amount of black substance" over the bones and organs, particularly the liver. The brain also was coated.

Physicians had diagnosed the disease as melanosis, resulting from a tumor on the liver. The autopsy failed to disclose the expected tumorous condition, they said.

STEEL STRIKE RIOTERS HELD

Face Jail, $2000 Fines In Clash Where 5 Died

Chicago, June 1 (AP)—Sixty-seven men were held in police custody today while investigators sought to fix responsibility for the Memorial Day steel strike riot that caused the death of five persons and injury to more than 100 others.

Police Captain Thomas Kilroy said the 67 participated in the bloody battle between unionists and sympathizers and police near the Republic Steel Corporation's South Chicago plant.

He said they would be charged with conspiracy to commit an illegal act, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $2000 fine upon conviction.

Van A. Bittner, regional director of the steel workers' organizing committee, said after attending a five-hour conference called by Governor Henry Horner that:

HOLDS OUT FOR CONTRACT

"This strike won't be settled until we get a contract. These conferences don't amount to a damn."

The contract to which he referred was the goal of the S. W. O. C. in calling a strike against the far-flung steel empire of the Inland and Republic Steel Corporations and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. The proposed written agreement would permit the S. W. O. C. to act as collective bargaining agent for its members.

Governor Horner said Bittner had assured him strikers would be urged to refrain from action that might lead to a recurrence of rioting. But Bittner declared he would insist upon maintenance of a picket line.

The unionists' attempt to strengthen the picket line and possibly close the Republic plant and the police's determination to prevent them led to a series of clashes, climaxed by Sunday's bloodshed.

Investigators hoped to pierce the fog of charges and counter charges over responsibility for the riot by taking testimony today at inquests into the victims' deaths.

Bittner laid the responsibility to the police and the company management and declared "if we can get the evidence we are going to have those policemen indicted for murder in the first degree."

Police and Republic officials countered with assertions the unionists and sympathizers provoked the riot.

Thirty-four of the men in custody were under guard in hospitals where they were being treated for wounds. The others were in lockups.

Eight of the wounded were in serious condition. Twenty-five policemen fell wounded in the skirmish.

Republic Steel Fights To Break Blockade

By the Associated Press

Youngstown, O., June 1—A triumvirate of steel makers locked in a bitter strike war with the CIO steel workers organizing committee, saw one of their number move relentlessly forward today to defy a "strike or starve" blockade thrown up by miles of picket lines in the six-day old dispute.

Republic Steel Corporation, second largest of the nation's independent producers, claiming thousands of men were still working in its plants, announced:

"We are not going to let them down now."

Republic's uncompromising statement, denouncing the picketing as "a military invasion," came as civil authorities in Chicago, Youngstown and Warren kept close watch on a tense situation and conferred with steel and union executives on plans to prevent disorders.

Tenseness also prevailed at Canton, O., where Carl Fane, 23, suffered a possible skull fracture early today when he apparently attempted to go through picket lines around Republic's alloy division, the only one of the concern's eight units operating there.

Police records showed he was taken to a hospital from union headquarters. His condition was reported "fairly good."

CIO Promises Aid to UAW in Ford Fight

Detroit, June 1 (AP)—Promised aid from the Committee for Industrial Organization figured today in the currently delayed drive of the United Automobile Workers of America to unionize the Ford Motor Company.

Homer Martin, union president, announced that John L. Lewis, CIO chieftain, had telegraphed him assurance of "every assistance" from the auto workers' parent body in the campaign.

The message reached Martin even as a showdown impended in the projected investigation of Wayne County authorities into last Wednesday's bloody fist fights in which union organizers were beaten on Ford property.

Heinz Grants Raises; Delays Opening Plant

Pittsburgh, June 1 (AP)—The H. J. Heinz Company today granted 10 per cent wage increases to approximately 2300 employes, but delayed reopening its strike-closed northside plant.

Niagara Falls Still Is "Greatest Show"

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 1 (AP)—There was "standing room only" at one of the favorite Niagara Falls scenic spots yesterday. Holiday crowds were so large that long lines of spectators waited patiently their turn to get a glimpse of the falls from Prospect Point.

New Sticker Drive Traps Hundreds of Autoists

Hundreds of Massachusetts motorists face suspension of their registrations as a result of renewed police and registry drive on stickerless cars today.

Inspectors stopped the autos lacking the official O. K. sticker and tried the equipment.

If the equipment of the stickerless car is satisfactory the owner will receive notice to appear for a hearing at the registry office to show why his registration should not be suspended.

GARRETT FREED IN DOG CASE

Oliver B. Garrett, whose activities as vice squad leader led to a legislative investigation several years ago, coolly listened to police testimony in Roxbury court today, and heard himself cleared of dog charges.

The former Boston policeman was charged with keeping an unlicensed dog and a barking and biting dog, at a garage which he operates with a partner on Ruggles street, Roxbury.

Judge John J. Crehan said that the police failed to prove Garrett was the owner of the dog, a five-year-old mixed chow and collie.

The complainants were Mrs. Betty Stevenson, who lives near the garage, on Dempster street, and Patrolman Manuel Davis.

Only Patrolman Davis testified and the dog was not in court, but many spectators flocked in to see Garrett.

Garrett was just as nattily attired as he used to be, when he was a central figure in State House inquiries and court sessions that rocked the city. He listened, unperturbed, to the testimony and was not called upon to present any defense.

Fear River Baby Slaying Victim

Stow, June 1 (AP)—Discovery of the mutilated body of an infant in Assabet river, which a medical examiner said might have been murdered two or three weeks ago, was announced today by Chief of Police Peter Larsen.

Medical Examiner Irving F. Armstrong, after viewing the body, said there was "a possibility of murder."

One leg was missing and other mutilations, he said, made it impossible to determine the sex.

Medical examination indicated the infant had been normal and about one month old when it met death.

The body was found yesterday by Forrest Nelson, 24, of Maynard, and his cousin, Albert, 26, of Stow, while they were canoeing near Crow Island.

Chief Larsen said a conference with representatives of the Middlesex County district attorney's office would be held to determine what action should be taken.

Man Hangs Self In Roxbury Cell

Charles H. Carrington, 62, of Pleasant street, Malden, committed suicide in his cell in Roxbury Crossing police station this morning. He was awaiting arraignment on a charge involving a young girl.

He was found hanging from a waterpipe when a patrolman made the rounds with coffee. He had torn his overalls into strips to make a rope, then stepped off the bench.

RESUME TRIAL OF CIO AIDES

Lewiston, Me., June 1 (AP)—Superior court trial of 15 John L. Lewis aides on charges of conspiring to injure the business of Lewiston-Auburn shoe manufacturers in the recent 69-day strike today went into its second week.

Resumption of a national labor relations board hearing also was called by Dr. John A. Lepp, labor board trial examiner, in the board's action to determine whether the Wager act was violated and unfair labor practices employed in the drawn-out controversy.

DEMAND FOR CODMAN BOOKS UP TOMORROW

Tomorrow's public hearing of the alleged "gift contracts" awarded the Codman Hill Construction Company will be confined to a demand for the company's books, chairman David Lasker announced today.

The commission's investigation, originally scheduled for May 15, later for June 2, will not get under way until June 21, Lasker said.

William J. Driscoll, president and chairman of the construction company, and Thomas F. Flanagan, director and accountant, will appear before the commission tomorrow to explain their failure to produce the books, in accordance with a court order.

They claim the books were stolen from Flanagan's car, May 4.

Navy Man Killed As Bus, Trailer Hit

San Diego, Calif., June 1 (AP)—A bus loaded with 33 navy men collided with an oil truck trailer south of Del Mar today, killing one passenger and seriously injuring 15.

The dead man was identified as H. J. Sandford, chief petty officer of the U. S. S. Monahan. Deputy Coroner Dave Gershon said the bus, passing the truck on a hill, hit the trailer and plunged 135 feet off the road.

This registration is the largest recorded in the history of the society. It is anticipated that more than two score women doctors will be present. During the sessions there will be scientific exhibits, clinical meetings, speakers, medical moving pictures, luncheons and the annual dinner.

Society Attends Annual Memorial Day Horse Show at Dedham

By BETTY ALDEN

"THE RED COATS have come" . . . not the scarlet clad British regulars who inspired Paul Revere to make his famous ride to spread the alarm to every Middlesex village and farm . . . but the pink coats of the gentlemen who ride to hounds . . .

In this day and age of beauty shops, Paris modes, and feminine splendor, the men are, by comparison, quite soberly attired . . . in spite of the efforts of the leading masculine magazine to inaugurate the use of suits and shirts of every color of the rainbow . . .

JOAN BASS

But until this major change takes place the only opportunity offered the conventional man to dress in brilliant raiment is to become a member of a Hunt or Hunt Club where he can wear his pink coat . . .

A dress version of the same pink coat which is worn to formal evening affairs at Hunt Clubs is a boon to the brilliance of any party . . . and at the hunt ball at the Dedham Polo and Country Club Saturday evening the gentlemen really did rival the ladies in the splendor of their outfits . . . the ball was a preliminary social gathering to celebrate the annual Dedham Horse Show which was held over the week-end on the polo field of the club . . .

Yesterday afternoon at the horse show the women regained their supremacy in the matter of colorful dress . . . the first real summer weather enticed new pastel and vivid-colored linens out of their wrappings, and summer hats and parasols were resorted to to protect delicate noses from the hot rays of the sun . . . and except for the men who rode in hunt teams, husbands and sweethearts had reverted to their conventional summer attire, white or palm beach suits . . .

The show, itself, went off in an unusually smooth way . . . with the exception of a few slight injuries to riders . . . and the classes were run off more nearly according to schedule than at most outdoor shows . . .

Patty Preston's day did not turn out as auspiciously as that of most of the other riders . . . for instead of winning any blues Patty found herself in a hospital bed nursing a couple of breaks in her shoulder, and wondering how she could possibly cancel her engagements and give up all the nice parties that abound in this season . . . In one of those unaccountable mishaps of the ring, Patty and her lightweight hunter came to grief in one of the morning classes . . . Dottie Preston, her sister, went back to the show in the afternoon, after making sure that Patty was comfortable, and cheered for a number of friends as they rode their mounts around the difficult course . . . She was one of the pastel linen wearers . . . a baby blue, tailor made model with a twisted turban of the same fabric . . . it made a pleasant contrast with the pink linen of Cynthia Forbes, with whom she shared a box for a while . . .

Nat Clark Takes Part in Classes

ELSIE BREWER AND CORNELIA PENTECOST watched their North Shore neighbor, Nat Clark, take part in a number of different classes . . . in fact, all the girls seemed pleased that Nat has extended his interest in horse shows to include classes other than polo . . . for he rode in the middle and heavyweight hunters, and was the third member of a hunt team with "E. L." Hollingsworth and Gelston King . . .

Sylvia Warren of Dover added considerably to her already large collection of silver trophies and blue ribbons with her winnings yesterday . . . her "loot" included the Frederick Page Royce Memorial Cup which was presented to her by Mrs. Cushing Hamlen . . . and also the Nora Saltonstall Memorial Cup in the Ladies Hunters class . . .

Two young ladies who could probably take their place with the best of horse show judges, since they have attended horse shows since childhood and have ridden a great many times, wandered around visiting friends and applauding the winners of ribbons in each class . . . They were Joan Bass and Mrs. Vincent Palmer, an attractive couple in their summer dresses . . . the former's was of turquoise china silk while Mrs. Palmer chose a printed frock of May Wine and white with a hat of the same combination . . .

Anne Soule strolled about the paddock with James C. Kernan of Cambridge, while her younger sister made certain her pony was harnessed up for one of the classes . . . and Katie Johnson and Edith Seabury who already have attractive coats of tan on their arms and faces, could relax in the shade while some of the sun worshippers sweltered in the sunny bleachers for the sake of toasting their skin to a golden brown . . .

Other railbirds we glimpsed were Jane Sears of Chestnut Hill, Mr. S. Eliot Guild who shifted all over the grandstand in order to get different angles from which to take his amateur movies . . . Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson . . . chairman of the show, George C. Rice, with Mrs. Rice, Anita Curtis, former Governor Frank G. Allen, Betty Dumaine, the Harold Willises, Mary Otis, Marlieeds Heard, Anne Motley and Mrs. Gelston King . . .

Leverett Saltonstalls on Visit

MR. AND MRS. PHILIP LEVERETT SALTONSTALL are just back from a world tour upon which they embarked last September . . . they expect to make a longer visit in Boston than they have on any visit since their marriage in London three years ago, and this time their friends will be able to share their travels since they have brought back reel after reel of moving pictures of the various out of the way ports they have visited on their cruise . . .

Mr. Saltonstall is the son of Mrs. Joel Goldthwaite and is a brother of Nathaniel Saltonstall . . . His wife is the former Paule Ponce de Leon of London, and since she has never stayed here long enough to make many friends, her longer stay this summer will be very pleasant for all concerned . . .

The final stop on their tour was, of course, London, and their movies include many reels of the Coronation, as well as pictures of far off Temples in Indo-China and Jave, volcanoes in Borneo, the Fiji Islands and Honolulu.

PHYLLIS FORBES is very proud of Craigie Var which she rode in the ladies' hunter classes in the annual Memorial Day horse show at the Dedham Polo and Country Club.

BOSTON after DARK

Told by a salt-tinged first mate on a passenger boat to Dorchester client who had dinner one night in the Captain's sanctum . . . Sinbad, a glum, sardonic parrot lived in a gilded cage in the suave salon of a transatlantic steamer . . . Used to the sophisticated banter of thousands of passengers, he had long since ceased to be impressed with anything and for two years had said absolutely nothing . . . even to the Captain . . . One night the Captain treated his passengers to a special performance by a beetling-browed magician, internationally famous and often invited by European royalty to uncork his trickery . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

Amazed and delighted was the audience as he reeled off hocus-pocus by the hour . . . The glazed-eyed parrot, in direct line of the performance, failed to utter even a squeak . . .

At last the magician, glowing in response to the thunderous acclaim, announced he would perform a trick never before done by any living human being . . . At this moment, as the fates would have it, a boiler in the hold of the ship gave up the ghost with a horrible snort and the ship was blown to pieces . . .

Fifteen minutes later the parrot and the magician faced each other across a chunk of wreckage, the parrot churning his feet in a frenzy to keep a grip on his end of the spar . . . Sinbad, both eyes open, spoke softly: "Marvelous!"

Political Prognostication . . .

'Tis being bruited about the town that youthful Cambridge lawyer and linguist John Henry Morris, who does attorneying now for the Works Progress Administration, is in line for something real large at the hands of Governor Charles F. Hurley—to whom he has been of material aid in his political rise—as soon as the place where His Excellency wants to place him becomes vacated . . . And, more than all that, it is reported that it will carry an honorary title that would be right down the Morris alley. John is another of those Boston College boys who made good in a large way at Harvard Law School with scholarships and things.

Municipal Musings:

Gathering momentum is the campaign to insert John C. Flaherty, of Dorchester, on the School Committee . . . Latest zealots are members of the Ward 16 Democratic Club backing his candidacy to the hilt . . . Rumpus on the political horizon looms regarding the Democratic nomination for the 1938 Attorney-General plum . . . With Paul Dever ready to poke around for an opening toward the Governor's chair . . . City Hall insiders also report that Mayor Mansfield is due to hop the Queen Mary boat in August . . . Where he shall go is not known as yet . . .

All Around and About:

New England's oldest amusement park, Norumbega, opens its forty-first season . . . They're going to dig for pirate gold again this summer on the grounds of "Ocean Born Mary House" in Hillsboro, N. H. . . . it's become a habit with resorters up there . . . The 1790 stone tavern in Basin Harbor, Vermont, will be managed, come summer, by a Mr. Beach . . . An inn at Winchendon, Mass., is called "Toy Tavern" . . . they make more toys there than in any other city in the world . . . The Cuddihy family, famed as baseball players 20 years ago, are running the Waumbek Inn on Gregg Lake in New Hampshire.

3 Comedies On Colbert Program

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, June 1—Claudette Colbert's sense of humor prompted her to say after the "I Met Him in Paris" raves—"And I would be a dramatic actress!"

But Claudette isn't letting her own preference sway her good judgment. She will give the public what it wants—comedy. "Are Husbands Necessary!" just purchased, makes three laugh-provokers being readied for her. First, "Tovarich" for Warner's, then "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" with Lubitsch directing for Paramount, and lastly, "Are Husbands Necessary?" A Dorothy Bennett original to be adapted by Preston Sturgis.

Louella O. Parsons

Of course, the burning question raised by Miss Bennett cannot possibly be settled until next year, for Claudette and her husband, Dr. Joel Pressman, are planning a trip abroad after she finishes "Bluebeard." It will be her first European trip in many a year and she doesn't intend to let anything interfere with it.

* * *

I don't know what would have happened if Darryl Zanuck couldn't have borrowed Jean Harlow for "In Old Chicago." He had his heart set on her, but for a few weeks it looked as if MGM would have to refuse. The part must have a real Harlow flavor for, after Loretta Young read the script, she told me she just couldn't see any other Hollywood star in the part but Jean.

In order to swing the deal Darryl had to promise Tyrone Power in exchange. So it's set that he will play the boy in "Madame X" at Metro. First, of course, he co-stars with Jean in the Chicago epic.

* * *

A line or two: Here's news. Elaine Barrie Barrymore is at work on a picture. A friend of this column, doing a little snooping at the Kahn Studios, discovered her at this small independent company at work in a short titled "How to Undress Before Your Husband" . . . We've never printed anything that created more of a furor among the people concerned than the item that Fritz Feld had been dialogue director on "I Met Him in Paris." A long letter from Mr. Feld explains that he had nothing to do with the dialogue and that all credit goes to Director Wesley Ruggles. We never meant to take any honors away from Wes, who did such a prime directing job—sorry! . . .

George McDonald, Jean Parker's husband, left for New York to confer with Harry Moses over the production of his play, "Romance." There was talk that he might go into pictures, but apparently he has changed his mind in favor of writing.

Snapshots of Hollywood

MRS. BING CROSBY, who is expecting the stork, says if it isn't a girl she will marry EDDIE CANTOR; GEORGE RAFT blossoming out with two new cars, a town heap and a sports model; MIRIAM HOPKINS showing up at the Brown Derby with a new escort, her young son, MICHAEL, aged 5; LYLE TALBOT stagging it several nights in succession—rather surprising for a bridegroom.

NORMA TALMADGE JESSEL rushed to St. Vincent's Hospital today following a serious relapse; JOE WEBER disconsolate over the illness of LEW FIELDS, who is going thru a flue siege; LUCILLE BALL giving GINGER ROGERS all the credit for getting her a job in "Stage Door"; CARY GRANT called back from New York, and FRANCES FARMER from Mexico, for "Toast o: New York" retakes; MAXIE ROSENBLOOM, with a new cute on his arm, refusing to reveal her name. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Bette Gets a Warning

Edward G. Robinson gives Bette Davis a warning in the above scene from "Kid Galahad" which comes to the Metropolitan screen on Thursday with the stage show, "Milady's Revue," headed by Melissa Mason.

Bozo Snyder Is Howard Star

Bozo Snyder's pantomime and comedy highlight the glorified ensemble, "Girls from the Follies" burlesque revue, current attraction at the Old Howard.

Lorrie Lamont, dancer, is the other featured performer in the burlesque revue. Assisting her and Bozo are Billy Foster, comic; Mary Woods, singer and dancer; Edgar Farrell, Alice Sohn, Joe Forte, Danny Jacobs, Jack and Polly Golding and Leona and Doris, dancers.

Lorrie Lamont

There are 50 girls in the cast at the Old Howard this week, as well as a chorus of 25 specially selected girls, who sing and dance.

On the screen, Ralph Bellamy is seen in "Counterfeit Lady," and Noah Beery, Jr., and Barbara Reid, in "Mighty Treve." The usual comedy and news reel round out the show.

The three shows daily are at 12 noon, 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. Every Friday night there is a special midnight performance starting at 11:30.

New Gayety's Bill

"When You're in Love" and "We're on the Jury," are the attractions at the New Gayety Theater today and tomorrow. Fpr Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the featured films will be "Woman of Glamour," and "The Holy Terror."

CHAPTER 22

Marie passed the two on the stairs, she ran to the hysterical girl. "Please come, Bee—come up to bed—whatever it is, the morning will be time enough—"

Bee flung off her arm. "Let me ALONE! If you must do something, get Mom and Pop upstairs if you can. All I'm trying to do is get away from them. I want to drive Ritchie over to his hotel—if that isn't a crime!"

The front door opened. They all jumped. Bee looked as if she were going to faint.

Edward came in, banged the door behind him. "What, may I ask, is going on? The Gertz girls are leaning out of the side window, taking it in. They'll call the fire department or a riot squad in a minute! Shut up, can't you?"

He took Beatrice roughly by the arm. "Pull yourself together! Whatever has happened, you're just making it worse, and Ritchie is waiting to get taken home. You silly idiot, why didn't you drive away when Pop shouted at you? What did you come in and start a fight for?"

"Oh, I didn't—I came in to quiet Pop—"

"Look here, not so high-handed, young man! No daughter of mine is going to pet in a parked car under my window! Not while I—"

"Claude," Mom said, taking the frantic man's arm, "you have no right to talk like that. Bee might have been talking down there, but no girl of mine would be—"

"I'm not deaf! I heard them! I saw them! To think that a daughter of mine—"

"Bee—give me the keys, and I'll drive him—"

"Claude, no matter what you say, I know better. I trust Beatrice. I know that no matter where—"

"Bee—give me the KEYS!"

"The most disgusting exhibition of cheap love making that ever I—"

Bee was really hysterical now. Edward took the keys out of her clenched hand, called sharply to Marie. "See if you can get her to bed—"

Then he went out again, carefully closing the door behind him.

"See here," his father called, "you can't—"

"Now that's enough, Claude," Mrs. Wilson said, "you'll take cold again. You'll all take cold. Bee—and Marie, too—you come upstairs—"

"You idiot! You complete fool! He was asking me to marry him. He was proposing to me—Ritchie Huntsman was—and because we were necking a little—right in our own car—you put on the heavy father act and try to spoil everything—When he was asking me to marry him—asking me to marry him!"

It was her mother who finally got her upstairs and to bed. She ordered Marie back to bed, too, so sternly that she dared not refuse, though she felt useless and stupid, lying there, wide awake, waiting, while poor Mrs. Wilson, dragged back and forth getting hot water bags, extra blankets, sighing with every step.

It was daylight when Edward came in. Marie whispered, "Oh, Edward—what REALLY happened? I've been so worried—and about you, too—you were so late—"

Edward took off his hat and coat flinging them on the chair at the side of the bed, and he was in no mood to talk.

"Must we talk now? Hasn't there been enough talk?"

"But I've been so frightened and worried—"

"Nothing to worry about. I got in a little game, and stayed later than I intended. Came home and got here at the tail end of the mob scene. I could hear you way down at the corner."

"Me! I didn't say anything!"

"Oh, all of you I mean. Bee, and Pop. Why she has to neck in the front yard, under the window, with the whole wide world—"

"Edward, Bee said that he was proposing to her!"

A QUEER FAMILY

Edward whistled. "Gee whiz! I didn't think he had that kind of intentions. Well, that's good." He kissed her. "Goodnight—sleep tight!"

"Sleep! After all that? Sleep! EDWARD—how can you?"

"How can I what?"

"SLEEP! After that horrible experience—screaming and yelling and Bee having hysterics—"

He turned over. "Don't exaggerate. It was a first class family fight but every family has them. Nothing to lie awake over."

"Nothing to lie awake over! And every family has them! Edward! Never in my life have I heard anything like it! Why we NEVER FOUGHT! We never called each other names. Nice people don't—it just isn't—"

Edward said, "Well, we won't go into it. I'm going to sleep. And if I had a mother with a temper like yours, I wouldn't get into comparisons. GOOD NIGHT!"

Everyone but Edward was up at 7 next morning.

Mr. Wilson's hand shook as he reached for his coffee cup, but he looked as usual, hair neatly brushed, shoes radiating blackness like a freshly shined stove, the usual rosebud in his buttonhole.

Mrs. Wilson's downcast eyes were deeply circled, but she moved briskly, competently, about the kitchen. Her voice as she called Bee was perfectly natural.

"It's quarter to eight. Everything's ready!"

Marie put a plate of buttered toast on the table, handed her father-in-law his boiled eggs, took away the sauce dish full of prune pits.

Bee came to the breakfast nook in the kitchen wearing her hat, as she always did. She dropped her bag and gloves on a vacant chair. She, too, looked just as usual.

"No, thanks, no toast," she said crisply. "Just my orange juice and coffee. Black, Mom—black! NO CREAM!"

Mrs. Wilson grumbled about people who denied themselves proper nourishment to keep thin.

Mr. Wilson carefully folded the outside section of the paper (he always left the women's pages, with the ads, for his wife) and put it into his pocket.

"Getting late," he called to Bee. "Werner's down to the corner already."

Bee glanced at her wrist watch. "He's early—unless my watch is slow."

She gathered up her things. "Finish your coffee," her mother begged, "and just a bite of toast, dear—just a bite—to please me."

"No time. Sorry—if Werner's at the corner, the train's almost here. I'll have to run now. 'Bye!"

She was gone, leaving a trail of "Christmas Night" behind her.

Am I completely mad? she wondered. Did I dream it?

But she didn't dream it. At the dinner table that night nerves were strained, answers sharp. For once Bee announced her intention of not going out.

"Going to catch up on my beauty sleep," she said.

Medication Helpful for Ulcers

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

I have recently received a number of inquiries about the "injection treatment" for ulcer of the stomach—peptic ulcer, as the doctors call it.

This form of treatment sometimes results in pronounced benefit. But it must not be regarded as a sure cure for every case of ulcer of the stomach.

Gastric ulcer, or ulcer of the stomach, is a common complaint. The number who suffer from this affliction is countless. Indeed, it is a very common disturbance of middle life.

As a rule, ulcer can be traced to faulty eating habits, but is sometimes due to infection, or follows some other disease. Diet, climate, race and general health are important factors in its development.

SEVERAL LOCATIONS

The ulcer may be located in one of several portions of the stomach, or in the first part of the intestine. If it is in the stomach wall it is spoken of as a peptic ulcer. If it is located in the first portion of the intestine it is spoken of as a duodenal ulcer. The symptoms vary according to the location of the defect.

In the treatment I mentioned, a certain substance is injected into the arms or buttocks of the patient. These treatments are given every day for about three weeks.

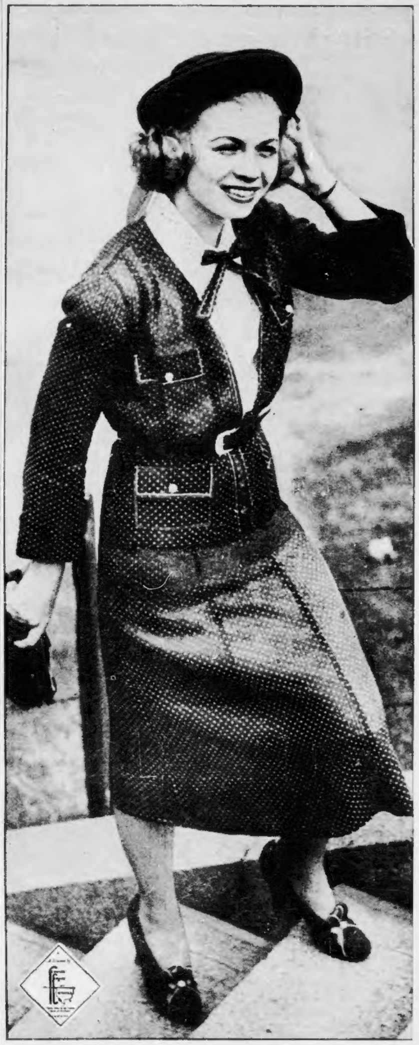
A study of several thousands of cases treated in this manner shows it to be of value, but only in a certain type of ulcer. It is not beneficial when the ulcer is extensive, involving a large area. It is not advised if the inflammation and tissue destruction are so marked that rupture or perforation is liable to occur.

RELIEF OBTAINED

As a rule, relief is observed after the fourth or fifth injection. The pain may completely disappear and such symptoms, as nausea, vomiting and gas formation are relieved. At the termination of the treatment, if it is successful, there is complete disappearance of all symptoms. Occasionally it may be advisable to receive a further course of treatment within six months to a year after the first course has been completed.

In the injection treatment the medication used has a soothing effect on the lining of the stomach. Of course, no one should submit to any form of treatment unless careful investigation has been made. Naturally, it can only be given by the physician.

Dotted Swiss Put to Work



ONCE UPON a time dotted swiss was for the Maud Muller summer girl who wore a wide-brimmed hat piled with daisies, or for the little porch frock that looked prim and very pretty of a Sunday afternoon. Who'd ever have thought it could acquire such a business-like air even while all its most becoming features stayed with it? Here's a budget business suit (around twelve dollars) chosen by the Fashion Congress and modeled by Miss Sally Scudder, that's smart, sweet and cool as a northeast breeze fresh in from the bay. Neatly tailored, with white stitching to outline the pockets, a navy on white reversible dot for the blouse, and red patent leather belt to spike the whole with color. The navy felt hat is not too open-crown for business wear, and it has long streamers. Also inexpensive. For shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Beauty Program for The 'Teen Age

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1937, King Features Synd., Inc.

YOU schoolgirls who work so hard to lose your plumpness will be surprised at the beauty advice given by Dixie Dunbar.

"Tell them," says she, "not to try to be slim. It is so much better to be ten pounds overweight than ten pounds under." And that from a movie star!

There's an amazing amount of commonsense underneath Dixie's fluffy curls. "Keeping your weight at normal," she says, "is the best guarantee of a schoolgirl complexion.

"With normal weight you tire less easily, and the skin is less apt to break out. Tell the 'Teen Age," she goes on, "to drink their milk, for there is no better beauty food than milk." Dixie knows that a good breakfast means pep for the morning, and she likes orange juice, cereal and a glass of milk.

At this age, posture is most important to your figure, for as she points out, "You can't have a good figure with poor posture." Dixie believes in dancing—tap, classical or modern—for the development of a graceful posture. All dancing does not help the posture, however.

Take, for example, the rhumba, which Dixie loves. It creates the habit of holding the shoulders forward, and rounded shoulders are not flattering to anyone. For good posture, the shoulders must be back and up.

In one particular, all dancing is alike, for it teaches you to use your feet gracefully and to walk beautifully. Dixie walks gaily, as if she loved it! From the standpoint of grace, posture and the figure, Dixie believes that dancing is the best possible exercise, but she does not neglect sports.

If you acquire an enthusiasm for some sport while you are young, you will not only develop a beautiful figure, but will be more likely to keep it. Dixie swims well, plays fair badminton and bad tennis. All games, to her, are imbued with a keen joy of living. Her beauty schedule is rounded out with eight to nine hours' sleep every night. No cocktails—ever! And if you think it's smart, it's smarter not to, take it from Dixie, who says, "There are so few girls who do not smoke that men admire a girl who doesn't."

Advice on street makeup for the 'Teen Age is simple: "Don't pluck your eyebrows. Let them be natural. Shape them if you wish, but do not make them too thin as this is most unflattering. Eye-shadow for the daytime just makes you look sleepy."

Dixie's own makeup is restricted to lipstick and a tiny speck of powder on the end of her pert little nose and the tip of her chin. She even likes freckles, because they look so healthy. "Why, they're cute," she says. "Lots of stars have them!" So don't let freckles worry you, after this.

Dixie is four feet eleven and one-half inches tall and weighs between ninety and ninety-five pounds. She thinks she is the only girl in Hollywood who is trying to gain weight! When you weigh more, you have more pep, she says, and 'Teen Age beauty has more sparkle for an extra ten pounds.

You 'Teen Age girls will find your beauty foods listed in the "Protective Diet Chart." Write to Ida Jean Kain and enclose a stamped addressed envelope for the leaflet. Address your request to Miss Kain, in care of the Boston Evening American.

Down-Side-Up Cakes

Cheese Gives Them Fillip

By MARTHA LEE

IN a topsy-turvy world, there are few things so pleasant as a down-side-up cake! Not half so casual as it sounds, but the result of inspired thinking on the part of some gifted cook, down-side-up cakes are made in any number of ways.

They may be butter cakes to start with, sponge cakes, your favorite "quick cake" batter—but they all have one delightful feature in common—that fruity, caramelized confection on the top, or on the bottom, depending on whether you are referring to the way it's served, or the way it's made.

Some down-side-up cake recipe is a favorite in most households. Children are given to demanding it frequently. The man of the house is generally scarcely less enthusiastic about this dessert—the perfect answer to the sweet-tooth craving.

It is the custom generally to serve this type of simple one-layer cake with a topping of whipped cream. But more experimental-minded hostesses may, with great success, try an unusual topping made with cream cheese to which milk and powdered sugar have been added.

The use of the mild but distinctive-flavored cheese provides just that touch of sharpness to offset the very sweet candied crust of the cake—a combination of friendly complements which is hard to beat.

A fluffed-up cream cheese topping keeps the sweetness of the dessert from cloying, and lends a distinct character of its own. It's a delightful change, and a dessert sauce which can be used with many cakes and puddings to the edification of both.

Few of us have ever had the pleasure of eating the famous clotted cream of Devon, served as it is in England with fresh or stewed fruits and berries.

This thick yellow cream, rich and faintly sour, contrasted with but complementing the sweetness of the fruit, is a taste delight much prized by the connoisseur.

The same sort of fillip to the appetite is lent by cream cheese, when it's served on an Apricot Down-Side-Up Cake. And you don't have to travel to the sunny slopes of Devon to enjoy it!

APRICOT DOWN-SIDE-UP CAKE WITH WHIPPED CREAM CHEESE

3 tablespoons butter
1 cup brown sugar
1 large can apricot halves
1 cup granulated sugar
¼ cup apricot juice
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs

Melt butter in an iron frying pan. Add the brown sugar and stir until it is well blended into the butter. Arrange the drained apricots, cut side down, on the sugar mixture.

Beat two whole eggs and two yolks. Add the sugar and apricot juice. Add the sifted dry ingredients and blend well. Fold in the two stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour the batter over the apricots and sugar. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 F., 30 minutes or until the cake is done. Cool, and invert the skillet on a large round platter, so that the apricots will be on top. Serve with:

WHIPPED CREAM CHEESE

2 pkg. cream cheese
3 tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar

Blend the cream cheese and the milk. Add the sugar, and beat with a Dover beater until it is light and fluffy.

DATE PUDDING

¾ pound brown sugar
3 tablespoons butter
1½ pints boiling water

* * *

½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons melted butter
1¾ cups bread flour
½ cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped dates
½ cup chopped meats

* * *

¼ pound cream cheese
¼ cup milk

Mix brown sugar, butter and water; boil 10 minutes, and pour the hot syrup into a shallow baking pan. Place milk, vanilla and melted butter in a mixing bowl. Add the sifted dry ingredients; blend well. Add chopped dates and nutmeats and mix thoroughly. Drop batter by spoonfuls into the hot syrup. Put the pan into a moderate oven, 375 F., and bake about 35 minutes, or until done. Serves 10.

Serve with cream cheese whip, made by blending cream cheese and milk, and whipping the mixture until light and creamy.

CHEESE PUFFS

4 egg whites
1 pound American cheese, grated
1 whole egg
Fine dry crumbs
½ cup currant jelly
12 slices broiled bacon

Beat egg whites stiff. Carefully fold in the grated cheese. Form the mixture into balls, about ¾ inch in diameter. Place in refrigerator until firm.

Beat the whole egg; add 1 tablespoon cold water. Roll cheese balls in fine crumbs, dip in the beaten egg, roll in crumbs again. Fry in deep fat about 1 minute, or until lightly browned. (Fat must be very hot, or the balls will burst without browning.) Serves 6.

The Best Opening Lead

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The process of elimination plays the most important role in the selection of opening leads.

Let us consider the reasoning that dictated the opening lead in today's hand.

West, dealer.
North-South, vulnerable.

North:
♠ K J 10 4
♡ K J 3
◇ A J 10 5
♣ J 8

West:
♠ A 6 5 2
♡ A 8 7 6 5 4
◇ Q 9
♣ A

East:
♠ Q 8
♡ Q 10 9 2
◇ 7 6 4 3
♣ 8 6 4

South:
♠ 9 7 3
◇ K 8 2
♣ K Q 10 7 5 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl.	2 ♡	3 ♣
4 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	5 ♣
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

West recognized East's raise, coming as it did over the take-out double, as a weakness bid, but still felt that there was a good chance for game if he could find fitting cards in East's hand.

When it came to selecting the opening lead, West reasoned as follows: A heart was out of the question. East had indicated at least three and probably four hearts by his mild shut-out bid, and North's double strongly suggested that he also had a few hearts.

South's takeout of the penalty double was further evidence that he had no more than one heart and perhaps a void.

West could infer from North's takeout double that spade strength would be found on his left. From the fact that South had been virtually located with one, or no hearts, it was hardly likely that he was also very short in spades. That being so, there would be little risk in leading away from the Ace of spades instead of laying down the Ace, and this underlead would retain control instead of relinquishing it.

It also might have the virtue of picking up an additional trick if East had the spade Queen and declarer went wrong on a guess.

That is precisely what happened on the opening lead of the low spade. Declarer, not being able to realize exactly what was going on, made the not unnatural play of the ten from dummy. East won with the Queen and returned a spade. West won and gave East a third round ruff. The Ace of clubs increased the penalty to 500 points.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

[illegible] people who have the least to [illegible], when it comes to marriage. [illegible] the former King of Great [illegible] a giving up a crown to marry [illegible] of her own charming [illegible]

"DESPONDENT."

DEAR CHILD:

Don't bank too much on that boy's friendship, my dear. He'd be as poor a friend as he proved to be a lover.

You have youth, and I'm sure you're pretty and attractive, or the scion of the snob family wouldn't have fallen in love with you.

Cruel as this experience has been, you'd never again be the complete patient Griselda that you were in your first love affair.

You gave everything and got [illegible]

You [illegible] that doesn't pay [illegible]

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

All the other girls in my set, [illegible] own age are allowed to have dates, but my parents will [illegible] allow me to go out when there's a crowd of several boys [illegible] girls.

BETTY G.

DEAR BETTY:

Girls aren't really supposed to have boy dates until they're 16 years of age. If parents are acquainted with all the youngsters [illegible] up they frequently relax this unwritten taboo and let their daughters go along with boys and girls whom they know.

The question is up to the parents.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was greatly interested in the various letters on jealousy which were published in your column in answer to an article. The man's wife was so insanely jealous of him that he was obliged to leave her as she was driving him crazy.

I only wish I had had that man's common sense, and had left my husband before I had the nervous breakdown that will probably remain with me as long as I live.

The doctor who stated jealousy is a form of insanity is right; what he neglected to state is that it makes husbands and wives submitted to it as crazy as the jealous person.

MRS. V. R.

DEAR READER:

Now that you have left your home seeking peace, don't let your thoughts wander to those unhappy days when you were a victim of jealousy.

We can all do so much for ourselves, if we stop! Ring off!

Forget past horrors.

But we have a way of hugging them to ourselves, and dwelling on them.

You have crossed your bridge, and now burn it as well.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Letters Made Easy!

A HARD job, writing letters. So Patty thinks.

Let us give you a hand—and you'll wind up in a jiffy. What's first? Thanks to Jack for his graduation gift to you.

Don't steer away from expressions like "divine," "too wonderful." If that's the way you talk a letter filled with the restrained "very pleased" and "most kind" would sound dreadfully stilted.

Tell just why you like the gift and what you're going to use it for.

"The vanity case is simply divine. I adore it because it's silver and goes with every outfit I own. Only I'm saving it to flash on very grand occasions."

Next? Congratulations to Mary on her engagement to Jim.

"I'm delighted to hear of your happiness. And [illegible]"

Next? A chatty letter to Jean [illegible] a thing has happened, you say. No matter! Write about movies you've seen, stories you've read in the papers, even what you've day-dreamed this [illegible] week.

And will you know—when the time comes—how to write a letter of application for a position? Our 64-page booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, gives easy rules and sample letters for all kinds of correspondence, business and [illegible]

Deep-Pore Cleansing Wash Restores Glow Of Transparency

By ARLINE GOULD

GENIUS isn't confined only to the arts . . . or science, either for that matter. It often pops up in the most astonishing places. But there's this to be always said for it . . . it is as easily recognizable as the first crocus of spring.

Take for instance the lush field of cosmetics. The genius of one of the world's foremost beauty specialists, had a field-day not long ago when she devised a washing preparation to take the place of soap.

Incorporated in this affair was a substance for defeating two faults to which nearly every skin (at some time or other) is subject to—blackheads and coarse pores.

While the cause of blackheads is known to every skin hygienist and specialist, few women seem to know—or care—what causes these ugly, polka-dotted blemishes.

[illegible] appear when the glands [illegible] the surface become overactive. Then the skin is flooded with a superabundance of oily substance. [illegible] clog the mouths of pores, forming [illegible] become blackheads.

What's to be done? Remove it, of course. But how? There are many scientific and effective ways of treating blackheads but certainly one of the easiest is using a grain or a [illegible] actually going down into the [illegible] of these pores.

A fault even more common than blackheads is coarse pores. [illegible] are [illegible] subject [illegible] always they [illegible] one thing—a lazy, sluggish condition of the skin.

Arouse it—exercise—awaken it and gradually pores become fine and invisible. And the same stimulating grains that are so beneficial for blackheads are just the thing, too, for a coarse pore condition.

This scientific wash isn't new on the market, but its efficacy is such that its popularity grows by the thousand every year. It is a gritty, stimulating affair (not fragrant or particularly pleasant to use) but the things it does in clarifying skins sets it apart from all other preparations of its kind.

To learn the name of this scientific granular preparation that clears and beautifies the skin, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, weekdays until 5 — write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Married Comrades

CHAPTER 317

ONE of the things for which I love my husband is his royal indulgence of the children in playthings which they crave and which are all right for them to have.

But there are occasions when his impulsive generosity involves me in difficulties and annoys me intensely.

"Dicky!" she said, crisp decision in her voice. "I don't think I've ever before questioned any toy you've given the children, but I must draw the line on bows and arrows."

"All right, Katrina," he said. "You're the doctor and we pass up the weapons of war for the present. Anything else you'd like, son?"

Junior would have been superhuman, a 'goody-goody' if he had been able to disguise utterly his disappointment and his resentment against Katherine for interfering.

"Then let's get going," Dicky said and we went into the dining room. I had no opportunity to speak to Katherine until the meal was over, but then I said with affectionate reproach:

"You shouldn't have taken the blame of that bow and arrow thing on your shoulders, when [illegible] had nothing to do with it. Why did you [illegible]"

[illegible] the state detectives [illegible] in order that they [illegible] be traced to [illegible]

It was [illegible] indicated this [illegible] that the identity of the writer [illegible] involved was no [illegible] a matter of doubt to investigators and that it was now a [illegible] of time alone before the [illegible] samples were secured.

For the reason that the investigation of this phase has progressed [illegible], as far as is known [illegible] experts have not been [illegible] though they may be doing so secretly.

One state detective who did not wish to be quoted on this angle said:

"With the threat notes we have and with any kind of writing from the women we believe were involved it would be a simple matter to trace the "Repent before you die" messages home to their author.

Further information as to the suspected identity of the alleged women confederates was denied to the press for obvious reasons.

Meanwhile the case against Thomas E. Elder, former dean of Mt. Hermon is being prepared for the court session on Thursday in which he is to be given a hearing on charges of threatening Norton with a shotgun.

STATE WITNESSES

State police and the district attorney's office will summon from six to eight witnesses, they said. [illegible] will include Norton, Yvonne A[illegible]ault, maid in the house next door to Norton's, Edith G. Weymouth, bank clerk and several persons from the Eagle Hotel in Keene, N. H.

Both Miss Arsenault and Miss Weymouth are credited with having seen the man who threatened Norton.

The Keene, N. H. witnesses are to testify about Elder's activities. He maintains that he spent last Tuesday night at the Eagle Hotel.

One of them is almost certain to be Mrs. Elder since she was the former dean's chief support for his contention he was in Keene last Tuesday.

There was considerable talk of Elder being asked to waive his right to immediate hearing and allowing the district attorney's office to investigate further.

Besides the threat letter phase of the investigation occupying detectives as they mark time for the Elder matter there were reports of a number of mysterious telephone calls also of a threatening nature.

It was learned that every effort [illegible] the telephone caller had [illegible]

ROBERT E. ROGERS

[illegible] presented a new kind of [illegible] AP [illegible] Oglethorpe [illegible] as [illegible] might be in Georgia, has instituted a Doctor of Public Service to take care of well known people who obviously do not rate an LL.D., a Litt. D. or PH.D. or any of the [illegible] honor [illegible]. As a matter [illegible] LL.D. [illegible] anything [illegible] except [illegible] a specific way and [illegible] in a general way. To be Doctor of Public Service, however, allows anyone to climb over the academic bars who has done something for the [illegible] in any academ[illegible] [illegible] Georgia grants one [illegible] for his "out[illegible] the theater and human [illegible]

Would Use Broadway As Youth's Laboratory

[illegible] Golden is pretty low in his mind about the American theaters. In an address he made [illegible] degree he proposed [illegible] announced himself as willing [illegible] boys and girls [illegible] students of both sexes might be [illegible] to work in connection [illegible] professional theater, using Broadway [illegible] for the study of acting, play[illegible] and technical work.

I make the statement without rancor, that the worst enemy of the theater today is the people of the theater. Perhaps the producers are the most to blame. The majority of them are amateurs or near-society dilettantes, night club habitues, angel-backers and shoestring gamblers with their slipshod, immoral, and even worse, unprepared productions, messing up Broadway."

Feast or Famine For Stage People

There are nine first class producers in America, and four of these have rarely, if ever, made a personal investment in their own productions, but have been backed by outsiders and motion picture money. Even the good managers either pay their players salaries high beyond all reason or so little that 50 per cent of the actors have to go hungry.

There is a dreadful dearth of American dramatists. Thousands write plays and hundreds are annually produced, and with our population of one hundred and thirty millions there are exactly five who have the right to call themselves playwrights."

Those are harsh words. One would have to [illegible] Mr. Golden's definition of a play or a [illegible] before one could subscribe wholeheartedly to such a sweeping statement. Perhaps Mr. Golden is a little chagrined because the New York censorship bill did not get by the governor, thus giving him a clear track for his [illegible] plays which no one could possibly find any [illegible] to. Anyway, I think I could find [illegible] of more than five who are competent [illegible]makers and able to satisfy even Mr. Golden's exacting requirements.

Harvard Sees New Light on Problem

Mr. Golden is not alone in his concern for the American theater. The late drama con[illegible] in New York talked quite a lot about it. [illegible] summer, we learn in the public prints, [illegible] Harvard announces a summer school of [illegible]. This coming from the university [illegible] the late George P. Baker and his [illegible] smack in the face although he [illegible] the best and most famous work in [illegible] theater of his whole generation, [illegible] to indicate a sense of consciousness [illegible] the authorities of Harvard in thus [illegible] of the most potent cultural in[illegible] that exist in our colleges.

[illegible] seems to have something like [illegible] in mind by the way for the public [illegible] students of New York. It may work. It [illegible] But Mr. Golden is probably right in [illegible] does work it will be in spite of the [illegible] people who control our professional [illegible] Bourbons, they learn nothing [illegible] nothing.

Bob Taylor Afraid of Future

Here are answers to several questions [illegible] millions of admirers have been asking about Robert Taylor. The answers were given to Ann Marsters, Boston's girl reporter, by Taylor himself. This interview, the ninth article in the new and exclusive Hollywood series by Miss Marsters, is another revealing study of a famous screen personality. One of the questions centers in a seemingly nation wide interest in what sort of a girl is Taylor's ideal. Follow this series daily in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

CHAPTER 9

Hollywood, Cal., June 1—You'd think that a young man in Robert Taylor's position would have hardly a care in the world.

You'd think, wouldn't you, that he'd be rather delighted with life, and that whatever complaints he had to offer would be minor ones.

But things haven't worked out that way for young Mr. Taylor. He has a lot of worries and a lot of complaints.

So let's go calling on Robert Taylor in his dressing room at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. It is between-scenes of "Broadway Melody of 1937" in which he is co-starring with Eleanor Powell.

Taylor [illegible] presents the same [illegible] the screen as [illegible]

"In the first place," he said, "I never have a minute to myself. I go from one picture to another until it's a wonder the public doesn't get sick of the sight of me.

Too Many Pictures

"I'm making too many pictures. I know that I am and I feel it's a great mistake. From my point of view it means that the public will tire of me a great deal sooner than if I made only two or three pictures a year.

"Then, too, I have to work so constantly that I've lost all zest for this acting business. I can't do my best because everything has gone stale."

It is true that Taylor has made quite a few pictures during the past year. But it isn't much more than a year ago that the public [illegible]

ANN MARSTERS ROBERT TAYLOR

Robert Taylor, being interviewed in dressing room at M-G-M studios, tells Ann Marsters, Boston girl reporter, that he can't understand why he's a star when there are such men as Clark Gable, Bing Crosby and Gary Cooper abroad in the land.

Discusses Future

And now [illegible] he [illegible] surprised or [illegible] grateful he has begun to worry about the future. He has begun to wonder [illegible] how [illegible] his spectacular success can last.

"I've been thinking about myself," he said with his eyebrows coming together in a frown. "I mean—I've been thinking objectively of myself, and trying to analyze what it is that has made me popular. I've been comparing myself with some of the stars who have managed to stay at the top.

"And frankly, I can't see that I have many of the qualities which make for a lasting success in Hollywood.

"Take Clark Gable, for instance. He has a kind of vigorous charm that makes him liked by both men and women.

"Gary Cooper has a certain quiet appeal that I could never hope to have.

"And Bing Crosby has a friendly naturalness about his personality which holds the public's admiration.

"But all I have is an appearance which the fans seem to like—at the moment. That's why I'm afraid that if they see too much of me they'll tire of me very quickly."

[illegible]

"It took me quite a while," he said, "to get over resenting that curiosity. But, when you consider the kind of business I'm in, perhaps the public has a right to know about such things."

"Barbara," he said, "is the best friend I have in the world. She's the only person I can go to with my troubles, and I can always be sure that she'll understand and help me. She's a wonderful girl and a wonderful companion."

It is fairly simple to figure out why Bob has been clinging to Barbara ever since he received his fan letter. During the bewildering beginnings of his career he needed some kind of [illegible] someone to [illegible] level head.

Fine Friendship

And Barbara Stanwyck, with her good sense [illegible]

"Barbara's friendship," he said, "is a thing that I shall always value and try to hold. There are times when I don't know what I'd do without it."

[illegible]

"To begin with," he said, "she must have intelligence and a sense of humor.

"She needn't be especially beautiful, but she must have an attractive personality. She must be an individual, with ideas and opinions of her own—but she mustn't be stuffy about them, or intolerant of other people's ideas.

"She must be gay, but not always gay. And she can't be too fond of night clubs. She must be a girl with a pleasant disposition, a girl who finds happiness within the home—and who likes to listen to me talk."

'KEEP EYE ON BALL,' VINES ADVISES

CHAMPION BEGINS 'BETTER TENNIS' SERIES

VINES REVEALS ROAD TO NET SUCCESS

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
14 BOSTON, TUESDAY, JUNE 1, 1937

'Keep Eye on Ball,' Vines Advises Net Tyros

By ELLSWORTH VINES

The most important thing in the game of tennis is to keep your eye on the ball. I cannot emphasize this point too much.

[illegible]

WATCH BALL NOT FOE

[illegible] up [illegible] the present high [illegible]

Don't spend too much time watching your opponent. Pick out the place on the court where you want to hit the ball and hit it there.

If your opponent is there he has outguessed you. This is especially important when your opponent is attacking you from a net position. If you try to watch him and the ball you are surely headed for a [illegible].

PRACTICE, PRACTICE

Now besides keeping your eye on the ball there are one or two other things that I want to get over in this first article before we go into the more detailed points in tennis.

The first is that if you are a Saturday afternoon or Sunday morning player try to practise some of your shots before you actually play in a match or set.

Take a good long warm-up on the court before starting to play. Try to hit most of your shots before you begin to play.

If you find your shots going well, practise a little longer than usual before you start playing.

I have found that more benefit will come to you if you practise when your shots are coming off correctly than if you practise when your shots are bad and you feel discouraged about not making good.

Above all be serious about your game and try to improve it. The following articles will show you how to improve the mechanics of your game.

Hearst Tournament Is Open to All

Every New England state has reported in with signed, sealed and delivered entries for the sectional [illegible] Soldiers Field courts on Monday, J[illegible] 28.

No matter how heavy they come, no matter how good or how average the player, there will be room for him or for her.

This is to be a tournament of OPPORTUNITY.

The unknown of the game, the man or woman player who so light has been hidden under the bushel in the past, may just as conceivably win this grand competition as the more publicized player with a more enviable tourney record.

The Hearst tourney, which is being conducted almost simultaneously in 17 districts spanning the nation, is open to every private and public court amateur player over 16 years of age.

Without exception these contestants are shaping their ends toward making the trek to the Eastern sectional finals to be held in New York in late July, and then on to Los Angeles in August for the Hearst Grand National finals, two trips which are to be awarded winners absolutely without cost of any kind.

Paul S. Rich of Newton says:

"I'm playing good tennis right now. But I hope to be at my very best during the week of June 28."

Rich is entitled to be optimistic over his chances. He played No. 1 on the Newton high state championship teams of 1935 and 1936. Last year he was a finalist in the state interscholastics. He represented the City of Newton in the New England public parks championships at Springfield last fall and finished runner-up.

Our hope is that no tennis fan in New England will be scared off by imposing records of other competitors.

We want everyone in the title running. And there's no way of getting ahead faster than by entering major championship play.

Such tourneys as the Hearst championship will accomplish wonders for the [illegible]

[illegible] She writes:

"I have played tennis for a number of years. But I have never before entered a tourney. I am 17 years old and hopeful that my first try will be a successful one.

"Even if I don't win I won't be discouraged. I'll feel the fun has been worth while."

Tennis Players! Enter Hearst National Tourney

Fill out this entry blank, you tennis fans of New England, mail it to Walter Kiley, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Massachusetts.

That's all that's required to enter the New England Championship of the Hearst Grand National Tennis tournament. Winners in the New England play which starts at Harvard's Soldiers Field Courts June 28 advance to the Eastern sectional competition, which will be held in New York from July 26 to August 1 and the sectional winners will then go to Los Angeles to play in the Grand Finals, Aug 10 to 15.

(Winners' expenses to New York and Los Angeles will be defrayed by the sponsoring papers.)

The only requirements for entry in women's singles, men's singles or men's doubles are that you be over 16 years of age, and that you were not ranked in the First Ten of the U. S. L. T. A.'s 1936 rankings. Anyone living within the confines of New England is eligible to enter the championship.

Entries must be filed by midnight, Saturday, June 19. Please include your telephone number, if you have one, to contact you the more readily in the event of any changes in the scheduling of the matches, etc.

Include your photograph in tennis action, if you have one, and the history of your past accomplishments on the court, if any.

AUSTEN LAKE

AUSTEN LAKE

THE HOLIDAY DOUBLEHEADER BETWEEN the Red Sox and Yankees at Fenway Park was rich [illegible] those entertaining incidents which a baseball crowd likes to retell in the years to come while riding the suburban trains or while waiting for the clink of ice in the pitcher as the bellboy comes down the hotel hall, or whatever a ball crowd does in its leisure time.

There was that torrid kiss which the sun planted on Rube Walberg's blond crown while he was winding up for a pitch in the eighth inning of the second game. Suddenly his knees buckled, and he sagged down to a sitting posture on the grass, while the rival trainers came out to slosh his brow with towels dampened in the dugout coolers.

It was oven-hot in the combined [illegible] and the body-heat generated by the 40,000 patrons [illegible] Rube said later that black pokadots large as [illegible] before his eyes and there were sensations [illegible] in his skull.

So he gentled down [illegible] nausea and revive in the shade created by [illegible] mates, until, presently, he felt [illegible] ing with the aid of some snuffles [illegible] aromatic ammonia which the Red Sox [illegible] of giddy spells among the athletes.

The marvel of the day was not that Walberg [illegible] cumbed to the sun, but that a large portion of the [illegible] packed thousands which sat frying in the direct rays [illegible] four hours were not hauled off, en masse, by ambulance crews. But they sat it out, peeled down to their [illegible] simmering and melting gradually away from themselves to the last drop of perspiration.

Foxx Betwix Cheers and Jeers

ANOTHER MEMBER OF THE RED SOX to experience giddiness was Jimmy Foxx during the [illegible] inning of the first game. But he did not resort to snuffling recuperative salts for his ailment. With one man out, Red Rolfe of the Yankees on second base and the score at 3 [illegible] Joe DiMaggio lifted a towering fly over Jimmy's pate.*

Jimmy used his pancake mitt as a sunshade and made go-away motions at Eric McNair, who eased over [illegible] offers of assistance. Foxx was squinting up and seemed to say from the corner of his mouth, "I am very grateful, but I think I can handle this one quite comfortably."

Only in the last split second of the ball's descent Jimmy changed his mind and may have said, "Well, [illegible] charming of you and maybe, if you are still hankering, you may make the catch."

By this time, of course, the ball had plopped [illegible] between the players' shins and, to put it politely, [illegible] sternation reigned from the stands in the form of [illegible] exceedingly loud and vulgar cow moos and noises [illegible] by passing the breath forcibly between the tips of [illegible] tongue and the upper lips.

Though the majority of the citizens blurted their annoyance at Jimmy, a sprinkling of the right-thinking element clapped him a patter of applause as he came out [illegible] bat in the next inning, so that it was quite a nip and [illegible] contest between the tongue bubblers and the palm [illegible] ters. Only when Jimmy struck out and was [illegible] the dugout and looking down the buttons of [illegible] were drowned by the locust sounds and owl hoots [illegible] a bum by popular acclaim.

So the Red Sox dropped that game by 4 to 3, though [illegible] ent from the joyful yell that bounced back from the [illegible] and soap signs when Foxx batted in two runs with [illegible] double in the next contest, that he was cuddled [illegible] heart and re-elected a hero again.

Gaffke's Disappearing Act

[illegible]

It looked as though he had the ball clutched in his big mitt as he disappeared, but no human eye could tell whether he held the ball after plowing through the crowd, though Mr. Red Ormsby, the umpire having jurisdiction on the play, accepted the catch on simple faith and shrugged Dickey out—a generous enough gesture under the rule of reasonable doubt. So that it seemed a little churlish on the part of Joe Cronin and the rest of his Sox to come storming in a hot tempered squawl that Gehrig had inched off his bag prematurely, and taken a running start for the plate before the catch.

There would have been quite a controversy over this, lasting way into the winter, if it had occurred during a World Series game.

I think it was the 1925 Series between P[illegible] and Washington in which Sam Rice went to the low outfield wall, bent backward like an acrobat and caught, or didn't catch the fly ball which would have been a home run. He was far from the nearest umpire, and his head and arms disappeared from view, so that when he came up there was no knowing whether he had caught the ball or picked it out of some customer's lap.

They decided that he had caught it and [illegible] after years when [illegible] looked him earnestly in the eye and asked [illegible] and the dirty faced kid in the street [illegible] he would only answer that the umpires had called it a [illegible] home run, and that was [illegible]

The customers thereabouts were never polled, but they were Washington customers, just like those yesterday were some belonging to [illegible] side, so that a poll might have been useless anyway.

It might be difficult for the customers, [illegible] that, and feeling quickly to see if their parts were in position [illegible] exactly what had happened in that brief eye twinkle.

Still, our side won the second game by 8 to 3, and the play was only one of the entertaining incidents which made the day pleasant for the steaming thousands.

LOSES MAST

[illegible] Vanderbilt's new sloop, [illegible] built out of his own [illegible] Bath, Me. and which has [illegible] been studied upon too affectionately [illegible] thus far Ranger's [illegible] was considerably [illegible] cutting down the time Vanderbilt would have liked to devote [illegible] tuning up and drilling his husky Scandinavian paid hands.

A few days after her launching, while [illegible] for Newport and somewhere off Gloucester, Mass., something let go aloft and her towering 165-foot spar snapped off [illegible] feet above deck and plunged [illegible] javelin into the sea. That [illegible] further delay in putting her [illegible] commission.

So tomorrow she will appear, [illegible] her initial bid and Vanderbilt's sired for defense honors, with [illegible] old stick, a left-over from Rainbow's 1934 trousseau which has been altered to meet rudimentary requirements. But no one can say if she will do as well under the makeshift rig as her designers expected.

YANKEE BOSTON BOAT

Yankee. Known as the Boston boat, although her present owner is Gerard B. Lambert. Defensive nomination narrowly missed her in 1930 the year she was launched, [illegible] again in 1934. In the deciding race of the latter year Rainbow led her across the finish line by a one second margin and her [illegible] partisans screeched bloody [illegible]. Even those who didn't [illegible] her knew she would have won if the expanse of blue water had been 40 yards broader.

Yankee is the grand dame of [illegible] fleet, older by four years than [illegible] of the others, British or American. Ranger is newly launched, Endeavour II about a year in the [illegible], Rainbow and Endeavour I [illegible] of 1934.

But Yankee has been traveling on her own keel since 1930. Lambert [illegible] took her to Europe, two summers ago to have a go at the British in their own waters, and her showing was nothing to be ashamed of.

SET WORLD'S RECORD

Incidentally, she chalked up a world's record on the 30-mile open ocean course off Newport, in a snorting breeze, during one of the previous trial races.

Those who weigh every element, tangible and intangible, in attempting to assay a sporting proposition are certain to consider the absence of two previous members of Yankee's victorious crews, Sherman H[illegible] and [illegible] Jack Parkinson.

Both were with him in 1930, when Enterprise defeated Shamrock V, last of the late Sir Thomas Lipton's green challengers, and in Rainbow when she sent Sopwith home empty handed three years ago.

Endeavour II Smashes Boom in Trial Run Off Newport

A severe blow to the aspirations of Tom Sopwith, famous English sportsman, was dealt when the Endeavour II snapped a boom on a trial run off the Newport racing course. Sopwith ordered the boat back to port, where the necessary repairs will be made. Fortunately the Englishman is prepared for any emergency, having a second boom to install. The Endeavour II and his first choice, the Endeavour I, are scheduled to meet in a series of races to decide which will meet the America Cup defender.

CHANCE KING WILSON'S BEST BET AT SUFFOLK

NEAL Rides Top CHOICE

ANNE G LIKED IN OPENER

By DAVE WILSON

BEST BET—CHANCE KING
4th RACE

Suffolk Downs, East Boston, June 1 — Chance King, second to Peerless Pal in last two races, should experience little difficulty in leading home less capable opposition in the mile and one sixteenth of the fourth stanza here today.

FIRST—Anne G, Charmed Eyes, High Maud

ANNE G, if started, needs only to [illegible] New York [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the G. Mc[illegible] [illegible] speed a [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] final. CHARMED EYES [illegible] six [illegible] in 1936 [illegible] home [illegible] [illegible] ring day. Figures [illegible] what appears to be [illegible] a two-horse race. HIGH MAUD [illegible] may [illegible] event [illegible].

SECOND—Die Hard, Squawker, Baby Sweep

THIRD—Sketch Book, Right Lady, To the Rescue

SKETCH BOOK displayed keen early foot against top flight juveniles in her only start last winter at Hialeah Park. The W. J. (Buddy) Hirsch colorbearer promises to be a difficult filly to catch if she still retains that calibre of speed. RIGHT LADY was away poorly in her debut only a few days back, but closed a big gap to finish third to Third Party and To The Rescue. She was probably best that day. TO THE RESCUE may have been short when she placed to Third Party.

FOURTH—Chance King, Iron Bound, Albuquerque

If anything upsets my dope and hands CHANCE KING a drubbing it will likely be IRON BOUND. The latter couldn't untrack himself in the muddy footing that prevailed in his lone 'Gansett endeavor. Previous Maryland form indicates that he is capable of far better things. ALBUQUERQUE is fast and faint hearted. May hang on long enough to save the show.

FIFTH—Prince Sador, Gallant Eagle, Zor

In finishing third to Ocean Roll and Trina only a few days back, PRINCE SADOR gave evidence that he was not far away from brackets. The Prince Pal gelding appears to hold a wide edge on this competition. GALLANT EAGLE, pitted too ambitiously in last two starts, may prove real troublesome if he races back to previous top form. ZOR is stepping up in class but appears to have a [illegible] edge on the remaining three starters.

SIXTH—Church Call, Mannerly, Lady Hockberger

Toss out CHURCH CALL'S local debut. The A. C. Compton colorbearer was noted too highly that day. Previous Maryland form entitles him to the top figure. MANNERLY and LADY HOCKBERGER are the main dangers. They rate as named.

SEVENTH—Blessed Event, Watchfully, Yankee Skipper

BLESSED EVENT, if he races kindly, should never be out of a pull in drubbing cheap platers of this calibre. WATCHFULLY, a hangup third to Medius Dies and Robber Time in last race, figures close. YANKEE SKIPPER moves up in mind.

EIGHTH—Paralda, Credulous, Mr Marvel

Going to give PARALDA one more chance. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] here that he should be [illegible]. CREDULOUS displayed improvement in racing to Joe Bain in his last race. He looks next best.

GOLFERS Seek Places in OPEN TOURNEY

Rumford, R. I., June 1—Three-score New England professionals and amateurs are playing 36 holes today at Wannamoisett Country Club for the six places allotted this section by the U. S. G. A. for the national open championship, which will be played next week at Oakland Hills Country Club, Detroit.

Among the Bay State amateurs here are Eddie Lowery, a former Massachusetts amateur champion; Ted Bishop, the long hitter from Woodland; the Martin Twins, Edward and Leo, from Sandy Burr; and Bobby Knowles and Allan V. Ellis, The Country Club.

WILLIE TURNESA, TOO

Willie Turnesa, New England Intercollegiate titleholder, who was the medalist in the state championships at Charles River last year, is playing. Although he is still at Holy Cross and a member of Wachusett, he is registered from Briarcliff Manor, N. Y.

With its entire first varsity available Connecticut expects to qualify at least one and possibly two amateurs.

The Nutmeg State has Bobby Grant, Frank Ross, Charlie Clare, Sherry Munson and Shaw Walker here and it's going to take some top notch golf to keep them all out of the U. S. open.

Sam Neild Jr., Pawtucket, winner of the 1936 William Randolph Hearst New England Junior championship, was one of the early starters playing with Joe Pezzulli.

TWO SOUTHERNERS

Among the Massachusetts professionals here are Harry Nettelbladt, Pakachoag Hills, and John Shimkonis, Andover, both of whom qualified in the P. G. A. championship last week at the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Then, too, there are Tom Mahan, United Shoe; Alex Ellis, Tedesco; Bobby Crowley, Norfolk Downs; Dave Hackney, Vesper; Joe Stein, Sandy Burr; and Emil Mashie, Oak Hill.

Bill Haines Sails Tonight For Britain

Bill Haines, former coach of crew at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will leave the United States for England tonight, sailing on the Franconia.

Haines, who told the members of the M. I. T. crew squad at the annual crew dinner that he "had been offered another position and was still considering the post," will return to his home in Newton in the fall.

All of the Tech crew squad will be at the dock to see Haines off for his first visit to England, the land of his birth, in many years.

Holy Cross Beats Eagle Nine, 6-4

Worcester, June 1—Holy Cross went one up in its annual series with Boston College as it defeated the Eagles, 6 to 4, in the Memorial Day game at Fitton Field.

The Eagles scored twice in the first inning but Bill Lefevre rushed to Roy Bruninghaus' relief in the second and held them in check the rest of the game.

5000 Attend Taunton Trials

Taunton, Mass., June 1—The combination of the holiday and good weather served to bring more than 5000 people to the Taunton dog track for the schooling races which opens the final week of activity before the actual start of Sportsmen's Park dog race meeting.

The big gathering saw Pepper Roll beat Fu Manchu.

Schooling races will continue through Saturday night with the last evening more or less in the nature of a dress rehearsal for next Monday's opening. By Saturday night everyone of the 500 or more dogs entered will have had at least one schooling race under his belt.

Dogs which won derbies during the winter in Miami and Jacksonville have rounded to form in a truly remarkable manner and as a result the season's opening, especially the inaugural handicap, should be productive of some truly keen racing.

Young Home First In Salisbury Marathon

Salisbury, June 1—Walter Young is the toast of this beach town today just as he was the toast of Boston following the Patriot's Day B. A. A. marathon.

The Verdun, Quebec, policeman [illegible] a high class field [illegible] Lawrence [illegible] Memorial Day marathon in so [illegible] fashion that he left little doubt as to his supremacy in his particular field.

Young ran a perfectly-judged race just as he did in the B. A. A. grind. Running carefully up through the field, the Canadian caught the leader, Clarence DeMar, at Amesbury, the 15-mile mark, and was content to string along with the heat-loving veteran until the 22nd mile.

Then he decided to make a go of it and won as he pleased. He had [illegible] at the 23rd mile, increased it to 250 yards at the [illegible] mile mark and had two-thirds of a mile on Clarence at the finish.

His time, 2 hours 5[illegible] minutes, 52 seconds, was commendable considering the excessive heat.

In third place behind DeMar came Leo Giard of Brockton and in fourth spot was Hugo Kaupinnen of Brooklyn.

Then in order came Roy Kimball, United Shoe; Roger Laponte, Nor[illegible] Y. M. C. A.; Cecil Hill, United Shoe; Charlie Welch, North Medford; Mike Mansana, Brockton, and John Semple, United Shoe.

Mickey Cochrane's Condition Same

New York, June 1 (AP)—Mickey Cochrane's condition was unchanged today. The Detroit catcher and manager, who is at a hospital here with a fractured skull received in a game with the Yankees last week, was considered much improved by doctors yesterday and spent a quiet night.

HUBBELL Respects DODGERS

WANT UMPIRES NUMBERED

By Associated Press

Brooklyn is still in the League . . . Carl Hubbell adds: "And how!"

New York fans are disappointed that Bob Pastor didn't stop Bob Nestell, who has had only 12 pro fights.

A lot of the customers would appreciate it if Messrs. Will Harridge and Ford Frick would number their umpires . . . The big crowd at the Polo Grounds yesterday howled when Burleigh Grimes sent in Van Mungo to protect a five-five run lead . . . Burleigh aimed to win that one, all right.

James J. Braddock and Max Schmeling are advertised to fight "15 rounds, or less" for the heavyweight title . . . About 15 rounds less would be what the doctor ordered.

PEDRO NEXT CHAMPION

Since he swore off smoking for a month Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, has been presented with more than 300 cigars . . . Jimmy's time is up June 13 and he hopes the stogies won't be too dry to operate on . . . This corner will risk a few bucks that Pedro Montanez will be the next lightweight champion.

There is nothing quite like the rivalry between the Giants and the Dodgers . . . They stopped selling bleacher seats for yesterday's double header at 11 a. m.

Some guys, particularly those who had their sweeties along, cheerfully paid $10 for a pair of $1.10 seats . . . Not a few addicts [illegible] $11 for three of same.

After 12.30 p. m. the cops wouldn't let you out of the subway unless you could show a reserved seat ticket . . . They'd say "Keep riding, brother," and push you right back into those cars.

GUTTERIDGE SPEEDY

Don Gutteridge, flashy third sacker of the Cardinals, is thrilling National League fans with his speed . . . In the last few days he has sprinted from first to third on infield singles . . . Fans haven't seen much of that kind of stuff since Ty Cobb was around.

[illegible] who used to turn out good football teams for Penn State, will have a try at the pro ticket as coach to the Cleveland Rams.

Boston fans proved themselves first flight sports by giving Bump Hadley (who beaned Mickey Cochrane) that fine ovation when he took the hill for the Yankees yesterday.

DesJardins Named Tech Track Captain

Paul DesJardins, '38, 120-yard high hurdler for the M. I. T. track team, has been named as captain of the Engineer trackmen, it was announced today. DesJardins, who has been a consistent point winner for three years, lives in Schenectady, N. Y.

Epsom Downs Race Derby Tomorrow

Epsom Downs, Eng., June 1 (AP)—Crowds swarmed again [illegible] Epsom Downs' [illegible] the opening of the spring meeting, which will be climaxed by tomorrow's renewal of the Derby, [illegible] by the world's [illegible] treacherous horse race.

Picking [illegible] three year old was one of the toughest jobs in the history of the classic. There wasn't a standout colt among the 21 probable starters, there had not been [illegible] [illegible] of vic[illegible] tory [illegible] owner [illegible] jockey and there appeared to be at least six probable winners.

Lord Astor's Cash Book remained the new 13 to 2 favorite, but chances were good that he would be supplanted by Le Ksar [illegible] at the final Victoria Club call tonight.

Goya II, the American owned and bred Perifox and the Grand Duke completed the big six.

The last American owned winner was Herman Duryea's Durbar II in 1914. Other [illegible] which won Britain's greatest race were Richard Croker's Orby in 1907 and Pierre Lorillard's Iroquois in 1881.

Glorious Twenties Return to Sports | Bill Farnsworth Picks Joe Louis

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

IF ANY FURTHER proof were needed to show the great popularity of sports with the American people, I call your attention to the tremendous crowds that attended the horse races at Suffolk Downs and the Red Sox-Yankee games at Fenway Park on the holiday.

Jim Linnehan is my authority for the 44,368 crowd at Suffolk Downs, while 40,000 persons jammed their way into Fenway Park to see the men of Cronin and the world champion Yankees in action. There were 5000 persons at the Readville automobile races.

The weather man is entitled to a vote of thanks for offering such an ideal day for the holiday attractions.

In addition to the thousands of persons who watched the races and the ball games, other thousands played golf, tennis, went yatching and watched the large offering of college, schoolboy and amateur ball games.

The depression [illegible] many [illegible] helped to make people sports minded. In an effort to forget their own troubles, [illegible] of people got interested in athletics.

[illegible] and higher wages in most lines of employment [illegible] sports for a healthy outlet.

* * *

BILL FARNSWORTH LIKES LOUIS

BILL FARNSWORTH, sports editor of the New York Journal and a former member of the sports staff of this newspaper, was at Suffolk Downs to see the horse named after him win the Decoration Day Handicap from a great field of sprinters. Bill bet $200 to win and $200 to show on Bill Farnsworth and chartered a special plane to take him back to New York last night.

"I wanted to see Bill Farnsworth run in the feature race," said Bill. "That's the least I could do for the horse that is named after me. There are a lot of horses Bill Farnsworth cannot beat, but he can outstep any of the mounts named after other sports writers."

I asked Bill what he thought of the Louis-Braddock bout which will be staged in Chicago on June 22

"As one of the original Louis men, I'll have to string along with the 'Brown Bomber' to win the title," said Farnsworth. "I look for a great fight. Braddock is smart, has a good left hand, a healthy right hand smash and a heart as big as Suffolk Downs.

"You won't find Brddock running away from Louis. He will crowd the challenger and match him in an exchange."

"Wouldn't it be a swell story if Braddock won by a knockout in three or four rounds?

"The advance sale for the bout has passed $400,000 in cash. The show will draw close to a million dollars."

* * *

THE SPECULATIVE element is offering 4 to 1 that Louis wins. These odds are most amazing in view of the fact Braddock is the champion. I do not believe any heavyweight fight is a 4 to 1 shot. Any time two heavyweights, especially a champion and a challenger, meet the odds should not be more than 2 to 1.

If you check back through heavyweight history you will find that these odds on favorites is a [illegible] trouble.

When Jack Dempsey [illegible] against Gene Tunney in Philadelphia [illegible] the champion was a 10 to 7 choice. There [illegible] Dempsey would [illegible]

[illegible]

"Dempsey is a cinch to win. He'll rush from his corner score with a shower of punches to the jaw, and then wait around until the referee counts Tunney out. The bout will POSITIVELY be over inside of a minute."

[illegible]

"I boxed with Dempsey in the gym, and fought Tunney several times," said Greb. "Tunney will give Dempsey a boxing lesson. Gene is the best man I ever met in the ring."

[illegible]

* * *

DOWNFALL OF MAX BAER

WHEN MAX [illegible]

The public installed Baer a 10 to 3 favorite over Jimmie Braddock. On the night of the bout, I stood in the lobby of the Hotel Edison in New York and saw $10,000 of Baer money going begging. Nobody cared to risk their coin on Braddock even at the long odds.

[illegible]

"I suppose," said Max addressing Ancil Hoffman, "that the crowd will boo me when I step into the ring."

[illegible]

"My right hand hurts me," said Baer between the sixth and the seventh rounds.

[illegible]

They'll admit Louis had a glass jaw in the Schmeling match, that he boxed a dumb fight and quit under fire, but they go on to argue he is still young and is improving while Braddock, past 30, is on the way out as a top fighting man.

These long priced title bouts at least give the man in the street with only a few bobs a chance to shoot for some real sugar. He has a better chance of winning than if he owned a sweepstakes ticket.

Gold Watch Jinx to Carl Hubbell

The "king of the hurlers" is honored by the one time "king of swat." Carl Hubbell of screwball fame and holder of 24 straight league victories receives a gold watch awarded by the St. Louis Sporting News to the most valuable player in the National League. Babe Ruth, home run hero of former days, made the presentation before 61,000 baseball fans at the Polo Grounds. The lanky southpaw failed in his attempt to gain victory number 25, as the Dodgers walloped him out of the box a few innings later.

Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis is enriched by $40,000 and the proud holder of a new speed mark. Shaw won the famed Indianapolis motor classic, set a new mark with an average speed of 113.58 miles per hour over the gruelling 500 mile course. Ralph Hapburn of Los Angeles was second, only 20 car lengths behind Shaw.

Firestone Tires On Race Winners

"This is the 18th consecutive year that the famous Firestone tires have carried the leading car and the leaders across the finish line in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis," stated A. T. McGrath, Boston district manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company.

Drivers and mechanics alike who participated in the race were high in their praise of H. S. Firestone, head of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, for his efforts in developing and finishing a tire that contributed to safety at such tremendous speed."

But your ad in the American-Advertiser will save you cash. The American-Advertiser will bring you any number of applicants for any job you have open . . . at the lowest cost of any other Boston daily or Sunday newspaper.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Ten soldiers and a non-commissioned officer from the U. S. Army base of the First Corps Area at Boston, will serve as timers and judges for the fourth Outdoor Model Plane Flying tournament for Junior Birdmen at Franklin Field the latter part of this month to decide the New England championship.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
(Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (two [illegible]) for [illegible] wings and other membership materials.

City .... State ....

My Age Is Now ....(Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

The [illegible] will be assigned by Captain James B. Patterson, head of the [illegible] of Brigadier-General William H. Wilson, chief of staff and will probably include those who have served in this capacity at previous competitions.

The chief of staff has served the army for 39 years, advancing to his present rank from a buck private with the New York national guard in 1898. His career includes wide experience in various army branches and active service in the Spanish-American war, the Philippine uprising and the World War.

He has awarded about seven foreign and American decorations including the Distinguished Service Medal.

Each of ten timers and judges will be provided with a stop watch showing fifths of seconds and flight record sheets upon which they enter the time set up by every contestant's model. Just before the contest the timepieces will be calibrated by a watch expert to make their accuracy certain.

Every model builder who hasn't already done so should write now for his contest manual which contains entry blanks, list of prizes, specifications of the glider, stick model and R. O. G. [illegible] to be flown in the tournament and [illegible] information. It will be sent free upon request on a letter or a penny postcard.

There may be questions arising as to the weight rules or other details of construction. The sooner the manuals are received the sooner model builders can ask these questions of wing headquarters and start construction of their craft.

The [illegible] award [illegible] New England championship, the trophy [illegible] goes with that title and a free trip to Atlanta [illegible] to take part in the national tournament and the week's entertainment for the 17 wing winners.

The runners-up will receive [illegible] gold, silver and bronze medals [illegible] Ace wing pins and red and [illegible] ribbon certificates may be w[illegible].

Every Junior Birdman should clip from Sunday Birdmen page in the Boston Advertiser, June 6, the plans for an outdoor glider. A glider made from these plans has been timed unofficially for over 39 minutes. What could it do in the competition [illegible] the latter part of June? Smart Birdmen will [illegible].

Deflationary Action
BY GOVERNMENT SHOWS
Signs of Waning

By LEWIS HANEY

([illegible] New York University)

It seems to me that the most probable happening is that the averages [illegible] react this time so as to lose all the preceding rally [illegible] in each of the three preceding cases. If it should do so, however, my guess is that it would hold at the preceding low.

* * *

I [illegible] to anticipate any large movement in either direction in the near future. Perhaps a slight rise, followed by another dip [illegible] prospect. But the reason for breaking out of the period of [illegible] irregularity has not yet appeared.

Of course, this is much the same as saying that there is no hurry about buying stocks. I am inclined to think that the recent market action is suggestive of periods in which the base has formed for an irregular recovery (for example, October, 1934). I would not sell well selected stocks. I merely say that political uncertainties being what they are one may as well be cautious about making new commitments for a while.

* * *

On the bear side there are to be mentioned the slowing up of new orders in industry and prospects of a moderate reaction in business. Serious labor disturbances are in progress. In some respects the market itself has shown hesitation, since the majority of stocks traded in registered declines on several days last week and it must be admitted that volume of trading fell off as the rally progressed.

But in the main the bullish arguments are more persuasive.

* * *

The market position was tested on Wednesday and Thursday, when another secondary reaction was suggested. It held, and the firmness indicates good technical position and investment confidence. Industrial stocks held their ground in an area where fairly heavy selling might have developed.

There have been fewer "gaps." The spread between bid and asked quotations has recently been less abnormal. In short, the market has gained a little equilibrium.

Some of the buoyancy of the preceding rally is still present, as indicated by the fact that a group of the most active stocks made gains each day but Tuesday last week. The tendency of the average was to close a little higher than the day's opening.

The composite averages have penetrated the upper boundary of the downward path which they have been following since March. This penetration has not been decisive, but in view of the rounding off of the decline, it is very suggestive.

* * *

It may also be noted that the weekly volume of trading has fallen to the low levels which have been usual at the bottoms of intermediate reactions, as in September, 1934; April, 1935, and May, 1936.

The passage of another "settlement day" in London, without any further financial pressure, is reassuring. Furthermore, sizeable purchases of gold by English authorities should be encouraging to those who have feared that gold may lose its goodness.

Decreased railway traffic is encouraging both as to the business outlook and as to the ability of railway stocks to hold at the lower resistance level which they now face.

In general, I think that the fear of "deflationary action" by government has nearly gone, and that both the administration and corporations now desire to bring about more stable conditions and optimistic sentiment so as to permit the successful flotation of new securities.

NEW Agricultural PEAK?

EXPERTS MAKE FORECAST

Washington, June 1 (AP) — Government experts who keep an eye on the farmer's purse and its buying power predicted today that 1937 may set a new peak in agricultural recovery.

The economists based their forecast on these trends:

1. Cash income of farmers the first part of this year has been the largest since 1930 and may approach $4,000,000,000 for the first six months.
2. The ratio of prices received by farmers to prices which they must pay has been most favorable since 1925.
3. Demand for farm products has kept step with the advancing pace of business and industry.
4. There probably are fewer persons on farms to share these advances.

Experts on agriculture and population pointed out the number of persons on farm decreases when times are good and increases during a depression. More farm boys and girls leave for jobs in towns and cities when urban employment increases, they explained.

Census tables of recent years reflect this trend. The farm population declined from about 32,000,000 in 1910 to 30,000,000 in 1930, despite the fact that the birth rate on farms is much higher than in cities.

From 1930 to 1936, however, the farm population increased more than 1,500,000.

Gains in dollar volume of farm incomes are reported by monthly tabulations of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. It said cash farm income the first four months of 1937 at $2,604,000,000 was 27 per cent or $554,000,000 above last year and was the highest since 1930.

The economists said prices received by farmers for corn, wheat, cotton, livestock and other major products had advanced more rapidly from low points of the depression, than prices of the things the farmer must buy—rent, interest, taxes, farm wages, and other overhead or farm production costs.

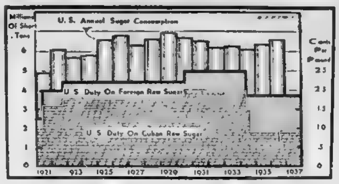
The price levels of the pre-war period of 1909-14 are used by the economists as a standard for their studies. In 1932, they said the general level of prices received by farmers was 39 per cent below the price level of things the farmer must buy.

This unfavorable relationship was reduced to 8 per cent last year, they said, and has averaged less than 3 per cent this year, the most favorable ratio since 1925.

Last year the gross farm income was estimated at $9,530,000,000 and farm operating costs at $3,725,000,000, leaving $5,805,000,000 for living expenses of farm families.

In the event of normal weather and average yields this year, Secretary Wallace and his economic advisors have predicted both gross and net farm income will exceed that of 1936.

Duties for Sugar Trade



Americans used 6,626,000 tons—more than thirteen and one-quarter billion pounds—of raw sugar last year. Based on the average price for raw sugar in 1936, the commodity was worth almost half a billion dollars.

To protect this important industry, the United States government has two tariff walls, and a quota system. Raw sugar produced by the insular interests of Hawaii, the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, are permitted to enter this country (within quota limits) without duty. Beet and cane sugar producers in the United States proper of course pay no tariff.

Cuban producers pay a duty of nine-tenths of a cent a pound, raw basis, while all other countries pay the "full duty" rate of 1.875 cents a pound. These rates have been changed at various times since 1921, as the chart shows.

The various interests in the different sugar-producing countries and sections are struggling to increase their respective quotas and at the same time to place duty handicaps in competitors' paths.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, June 1—The spell of dullness in the stock market recently has stirred up the inevitable wave of "economy thought among brokerage houses.

Therefore, to pare expenses, some houses have adopted the policy of charging a service fee of two dollars on an account which has not been active in a calendar month. This practice has been carried on by a few houses for the past year or two. The custom in several instances has been to charge an annual fee of $25 and then, if commissions exceeded that sum during the year a credit would be allowed. A revival of economy thought has brought more of the "service chargers" into the ranks recently, while others are contemplating the step. In numerous instances efforts are being made to weed out inactive accounts, notably that taken by Ladenburg-Thalman.

New Pay-Work Bill Effect Seen Mild

New wage-hour legislation proposed by the Administration does not seriously threaten [illegible] operations and is comparatively mild according to an appraisal of the pending measure made by Standard Statistics. Stating there are few industries that do not already meet the contemplated requirements as to minimum wages and maximum hours on labor, the agency contended: "Probably the only industry which would be affected to any marked degree is textiles. Even in this trade many companies are still adhering to the National Recovery Administration standards and general working conditions are on a considerably higher plane than they were several years ago. However, a few branches of the textile trade will doubtless fall under the wage and hour and child labor provisions. It is also possible that adjustments will have to be made by certain retail trade organizations."

Foreign Deposits Here on Increase

Latest figures on banking position in this district afford substantial proof of evidence that part of the proceeds of foreign security sales in this country are being left on deposit here and are not being entirely withdrawn by their owners abroad. Last week foreign deposits of New York City reporting member banks increased $23,000,000, lifting the total about $90,000 above the level just prior to the mid-April stock market decline.

* * *

Sustained Ore Traffic Seen

Noteworthy in railroad freight trends is the heavy movement of iron ore, which last week totaled 72,272 cars, an increase of 35,416 cars over a year ago. Rail men point out heavy ore traffic is assured for the rest of the season because of the heavy steel mill operations, and substantial backlogs of unfilled orders.

Mexican Oil News Effect Minimized

Major oil producing interests here minimized the possible effects of the Mexican [illegible] on the domestic crude and fuel oil markets. One source pointed out that Mexico furnishes only about 10 per cent of the total crude oil imports to this country. American refineries last year received 32,327,000 barrels of foreign crude of which only 3,984,000 barrels came from Mexico.

* * *

Truck Transport of Petroleum Gains

Statistics compiled by the American Trucking Association show that petroleum transported by trucks during April increased by 4.65 per cent over March and by 29.6 per cent over April last year. These gains were striking because the increase in all freight amounted to 2.16 per cent over March and 20.08 per cent over April, 1936. Explanations of the greater gains of petroleum over other freight were not forthcoming.

FIND Current Trade UNEVEN

BANK SURVEYS STUDIED

Three banking reviews of business conditions agree in saying that elements for both optimism and pessimism exist in current conditions.

Business conditions in May were of the same general character as in April, the National City Bank reports.

Industries have well-filled order books to work on and production in most lines is at peak levels at the time when a seasonal tapering off is expected. Factory indexes of production average 18 to 20 per cent higher than last year. June is "certain to be another good month," the review of this bank says.

The continued large gain in farm income, which was 24 per cent higher in April than in 1936, is "another item on the optimist's side."

CONSUMERS GOODS OFF.

On the other hand the slackening of new business in some industries which appeared in April has carried over into May. In consumers goods orders "have run well below shipments for the second consecutive month." Disappointment with retail sales have been expressed in some areas the bank continues.

Activity in business generally "has been sustained at a comparatively high level in recent weeks, despite the unsettling influences of further labor disturbances in some industries and continued recessions in commodity and security markets," the survey of the Guaranty Trust Company remarks.

There is a tendency to regard the downward movement of prices as a "favorable, rather than an unfavorable, business influence since it has helped to correct a speculative situation that was viewed by many observers as having reached unwholesome proportions," the survey continues.

VIEWS OF A. B. A.

Current business opinion is a mixture of anxiety and optimism in about equal parts, according to the June issue of Banking, the official journal of the American Bankers Association.

There is a fairly general expectation of lower activity throughout the summer, the publication reports, coupled with earnest hope that the advance will be resumed in the autumn.

The journal looks forward to a breathing spell of two or three months now, especially in view of the rapid expansion of the past year.

There is notably less disposition, it points out, to avoid the realities of the federal budget situation. Business, it finds, seems in a mood to face the prospect of higher taxes as inevitable.

Political Interference
SLOWING UP
Economic Progress

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

New York, June 1 — This broad recovery movement has been challenged and checked at various stages by well meaning kibitzers.

Politicians, over[illegible] own contribution to [illegible] progress, have [illegible] psychological [illegible] marks which have [illegible] slow up the recovery trends.

Fundamental economic factors are, it seems, [illegible] favorable to recovery, and [illegible] further significant forward [illegible] in economic activity and in popular living standards [illegible] ment and business on the one hand and management and labor on the other [illegible] more wholehearted.

Of course generalizations about the totality of [illegible] numerous individual [illegible]. For example production has [illegible] since the December peak [illegible] struction. However the [illegible] automobiles and steel has been somewhat less than the [illegible] seasonal expectation and there has been an actual [illegible] in soft coal output and in cotton consumption.

Official discouragement at Washington of proposals for an accurate nation-wide study of employment and unemployment leaves the subject wide open for official and unofficial guessers. Of all the estimators, the National Industrial Conference Board is at the van of those who base their guesses on careful sampling of factual material.

Since unemployment depends largely on definitions and [illegible] agreement as to which of the persons seeking [illegible] employed should be included among the [illegible] less the board properly starts with an enumeration of those actually at work. Its studies indicate that in March, 1937 [illegible] persons were at work for all divisions of enterprise. This is [illegible] per cent fewer than in March, 1929, without making allowance for the growth in population of roughly 5 per cent. Manufacturing employment, however, according to this survey, was 5 per cent larger than in March, 1929.

This study placed total unemployment in March at 7,[illegible] persons, registering a [illegible] shrinkage of 7,455,000 since the nadir of the depression in March, 1933. [illegible]

"The company's total receipts in 1897," Perry added, "amounted to $4,707,351. They were 24 times that in 1936, or $113,[illegible]. The company's assets have increased 28 times from $20,512,647 in 1897 to $572,117,958 in 1936."

Adjustment of operating contracts of shipping lines before this date (deadline set under the Maritime Act) appears unlikely. Commission has given no indication that it will ask for extension.

Maritime Bureau Rescinds Order

In announcing the action the commission said it found government-owned lines, if they joined these conferences, would be at a disadvantage because of their slow cargo vessels in competing with the fast passenger and cargo ships of foreign flag members.

The commission said it favored the conference system and desired all lines it controls to join conferences provided their participation was based upon equitable terms and due regard to the protection and interests of these lines.

New Truck Sales Up 9.6 PC This Year

Registration of new trucks the the first three months of 1937 were close to 150,000 units as compared with approximately 136,000 units in the same month of 1936, according to Poor's Stock Reports. These figures for the current year represent an advance of 9.6 per cent.

GOODS PRICING

Labor Influence Decisive Factor

The increased wage bill paid to labor, and the prospects of a further increase shortly, is one of the factors being pointed out as necessitating higher prices for goods.

This is particularly true in consumer goods which are sold directly to the public. The apparel trades have been pointing out for nearly a year the necessity of revising their price structure upward.

As a result of the [illegible] over rising prices, trade officials are beginning to point out the causes of them. One such explanation of the effect of increased labor costs is offered for foods.

According to Gordon C. Corbaley, president of the American Institute of Food Distribution, the labor influence is a decisively new factor affecting costs, prices, consumption and the general condition of business.

It is a new influence which food markets must consider for the first time this year, he states.

Inflation of the price paid for labor, he pointed out, means a corresponding inflation of prices and on the other side of the market balance an equal inflation of consumption.

This, he declares, "has become a force of influence of startling importance in the food markets." The delivered price of every food, he declares, is largely labor.

Business of the country is operating on a sellers market for labor, Mr. Corbaley says. This, he believes, does not mean that labor costs will pyramid within a few months, or that every community and industry will pass rapidly under the control of the unions.

It does mean, however, he declared, "that the influence of advancing labor costs and larger consumption by the working population must now be seriously considered in analyzing the probable trend of each food market in prices and in consumer power."

Boston BANK IS Bullish

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The current New England Letter of the First National Bank of Boston not only contains a bullish review of business so far this year but supplies a most optimistic picture of the future.

Noting that increases in industrial activity have continued with but minor setbacks since the fall of 1934 the letter says it would not be surprising if there were a slackening during the summer months. Such a prospect is indicated by a decline in the volume of new business being placed. But it adds that any letdown that may occur will likely be but a temporary interruption of the general upward movement. Bulwarking these views on further recovery is the thought that after such a prolonged period of depression there is still a large amount of deferred demand to be filled.

With major news events taking place while domestic markets were closed during an extended week-end holiday it is only natural that traders and investors study foreign markets for a clue to nearby price movements. Spanish developments generally proved unsettling at first but it is to be noted that late cables today told of price firmness. All in all it appears that Berlin is satisfied with its retaliatory measures and further incidents will be avoided. To our mind the spread of new gold rumors in London is the more serious affair. Repercussions were felt by both African and Canadian gold stocks and it is safe to assume that the problem has yet to be taken care of by the leading managed currency nations.

• • •

One effect of these recurring gold rumors is to dislodge hoarded gold, according to the cables. Thus the problem of over-production by mines is being aggravated and even though London and Washington appear to be working in harmony we continue to feel that the chances are somewhat better than even steps will be taken to discourage output.

• • •

The position of average prices as well as the poor character of current news make it difficult for the writer to offer readers much that is new in regard to the market outlook. The rails as previously noted hold the key. Should they break down to a new intermediate low a confirmation of the previous action by the industrials will be seen by many observers. The result will, in all probability, be an increase in offerings carrying prices to new lows in all directions. If, by chance, volume does not pick up as rails decline to new lows it will look as though nothing more serious than a false move has taken place.

• • •

Those who have a taste for conjecture are of the opinion that if prices slide into new low ground this week it will be the final gasp on the downside. Many observers in fact will speed accumulation on further weakness. All on the theory that the market is becoming so well sold out that when a turn comes a very thin offering situation will exist and it will be hard to obtain good stocks near the lows.

STOCK Prices WEAK

DECLINES RUN TO 4 POINTS

New York, June 1—The stock market broke as much as 4 points in the leaders today with Wall Street unnerved by the European situation.

U. S. Steel slumped 4 points before the decline was halted. Bethlehem, Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube each tumbled more than 2 points at one time.

Chrysler also was a heavy loser, dropping almost 4 points to 109⅛. General Motors limited its loss to a little over a point.

In a weak carrier division, Southern Pacific slid more than 3 points, while such leaders as Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio and N. Y. Central fell more than 2.

Declines in the copper list also were substantial. American Smelting lost over 3, and Kennecott and Anaconda about a point less.

N. Y. Steam 7 per cent preferred, in the inactive classification, slumped more than 10 points.

Bonds were heavy with stocks, although governments moved irregularly higher. Grains, particularly wheat, were strong. Cotton, though, lost 75 cents a bale.

CURRENT ITEMS

On the optimistic side of the market ledger was the monthly survey of the National City Bank of New York disclosing that, despite labor upsets, production in most industrial lines is holding around peak levels.

Observers in the machine tool field reported manufacturers are anticipating no material recession in sales this month but are looking for a substantial contraction in volume during the late summer at least.

While orders for tools hit a new record in April, it was believed business in May was not far under that of the preceding month.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions sterling was off 9-16 of a cent at $4.98. The French franc was .00⅝ of a cent lower at 4.45¾ cents.

Total operating revenues of Indiana Harbor Belt Railroad in 1936 were $10,479,637, an increase of $1,967,622 or 22 per cent over 1935, according to the road's annual report.

Switching revenue in 1936, which included $461,726 received from the emergency freight surcharges which expired December 31 last, totaled $10,272,497, an increase of $1,925,564, or 23.07 per cent over 1935.

Average receipts per car earning revenue increased 35 cents to $9.11 in 1936.

NEW Work-Pay BILL

REVIVES NRA PRINCIPLE

By GENE ROBB

Washington, June 1—Ghosts of the "NRA," "AAA" and other pieces of New Deal scaffolding which went tumbling down under Supreme Court fire are raised anew in the President's labor standards bill for national regulation of wages, hours and work by children.

Recent "liberal" court decisions likewise are clearly mirrored in the measure which is hung on every conceivable constitutional peg that brain trust draftsmen could think of.

As hearings start today. Congressional sentiment for minimum standards will be unanimous. Even the Republicans will voice their approval of these principles. But a rising tide of opposition to the administration's suggestions in the Black-Connery Bill presages many changes in the measure before it becomes law.

Controversy is certain over what figures to insert in blank spaces left for basic minimum wages and maximum work-week. However, they are relatively unimportant. In any case, the bill provides for raising or lowering them by administrative regulation and order.

"SUPREME COURT PROOF"

Under the Administration bill no series of adverse Supreme Court decisions would be permitted to shatter the proposed labor standards act. Court authority to rule on constitutionality is not denied, but it is drastically abridged.

Courts could rule only on specific points at issue in any case their decision would apply only to that case. Though certain provisions were declared invalid, other companies subjected to the same provisions by the act would be compelled to abide by them unless they, too, carried these points up through the courts.

"COMMERCE" EXPANDED

All-encompassing powers, through an expanded conception of interstate commerce, are sought for the five-man labor standards board the measure would create. Not only would the board exercise authority over firms trading between States; it also could reach down to regulate purely intrastate companies which were competing with interstate outfits.

And while the measure specifically exempts business men who employ only a few helpers—exact number is left blank in the bill, it proceeds to give the board the right to make exceptions to the exemptions where labor practices of small firms lead it to believe it should take a hand.

CODES OF NEW COLOR

Instead of "code authorities" as set up under NRA, the labor standards bill contemplates an avalanche of "advisory committees"—centralizing even more than NRA the power of the administrative board.

Advisory committees would be composed of employer and employe representatives, plus not more than three members "from the public." Responsibility for investigating labor conditions in all businesses will fall largely on these groups which will make wage and hour recommendations for the various occupations. The board can take them or leave them.

Labels issued by the board bearing insignia it prescribes may be required to keep "unfair goods" from trade channels.

FISHING EXPEDITIONS

All books, records and documents of private business would be open at all times to scrutiny of agents from the labor standards board, Department of Labor, and children's bureau. Complete employment records—names, ages, wages, hours, tenure, etc.—would be required of each employer.

Uniform forms for keeping records and making reports on labor practices, which the board can call for at any time, would be prescribed in detail. Failure to submit reports, to open books to Federal agents, to make false entries, to pay at least minimum wages, etc., would make employers liable to criminal penalties.

AGAINST STRIKEBREAKERS

By a rigid definition of "unfair goods"—barred from interstate trade—the bill makes it unlawful for any employer to hire strikebreakers or "substitutes" while a labor dispute is in progress unless he intends to keep them permanently and pays them no more than striking workmen received.

Espionage also is prohibited. Employers would not be allowed to use spies to learn political or economic views of their workers.

Wall Street Hears

New York, June 1 (INS)—That first half profits of American Rolling Mill (ARO) should approximate $6 a share.

That common dividends of Atchison, Topeka & Sant Fe Railway (A) this year are expected to reach $4 a share.

That Warren Foundry & Pipe (WFP) profits for the initial six months may top $1 a share.

Building BOOM SHOULD Develop

By B. C. FORBES

In which field is there greatest room for expansion representing healthy prosperity?

In building, especially home building.

The government should select a commission to visit Europe, particularly Britain when Congress rises—if it ever does rise this summer—to investigate just how home building has been made possible there on a very large scale.

Its members should include two or three influential lawmakers intensely interested in the subject, one or two financiers able to command capital for private home building, one or two well qualified industrialists and one or two heavyweight representatives of building trades.

• • •

Such a commission could find out for example how Britain has found it possible to bring into being in less than 15 years enough new homes to house half of her entire population.

Nothing impressed me more on my last visit to Britain than the tremendous number and magnitude of new groups of homes for families of very modest means. In and around Glasgow veritable miracles have been wrought. I enjoyed the privilege of being invited to several of these homes, of dining in them, of inspecting them, and of learning from housewives how convenient, attractive, well equipped they were.

• • •

In the early stages of this home building renaissance the British government furnished most of the funds. Municipalities later entered enthusiastically into the project.

But, most significant and encouraging of all, the great bulk of the activity in recent years has been privately financed. Builders found a ready market for up to date, low priced homes, with the most modern kitchen and other appliances, and usually with small gardens suitable for raising vegetables and growing flowers.

• • •

That America badly needs several million new homes within the means of workmen and low salaried breadwinners is universally acknowledged.

But, because of the high wages demanded by building craftsmen and the relatively high costs of materials, there has not yet set in a nationwide building boom. Such a boom would have more far-reaching stimulating influence in a thousand directions than would any other one form of individual activity.

• • •

Whereas publicly financed construction dominated during the worst years of the depression, and as recently as the beginning of last year, privately financed building is now running far ahead.

• • •

Private construction, on the other hand, is conspicuously ahead of any post depression. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York records that private construction has been running as high as 77 per cent of the total, "the highest percentage since compilation of these figures was begun." Publicly financed building is the lowest in about two years.

• • •

But all authorities emphasized that high costs are acting as a serious brake on home building. And unfortunately, the trend is still upwards. Observes the National City Bank of New York:

"The upward trend of building costs is worthy of particular reference . . . In New York City a number of wage increases and changes in working practices are scheduled, all to be passed on to consumers. Bricklayers, now receiving $12 for an eight-hour day, are expected to get $13.20 for seven hours. The plasterer's day is to be cut from eight to six hours, pay unchanged at $12.

"Whether because of these increases or other factors, latest building figures have been disappearing."

• • •

If Britain could find ways and means to build new homes for half her people, and do it largely through private financing, surely our own infinitely richer country, with its higher wages and standards of living, should prove able to evolve a sound, workable, extensive home building program.

Sees Further Rise In Capital Goods

Continuance of the present high rate of plant construction throughout the summer was predicted by George A. Bryant, executive vice-president of the Austin Co., on the basis of sustained heavier industrial construction awards so far this year. He said the wide range of new construction activity is the soundest evidence of business recovery.

Mr. Austin reported the capital goods industries are going forward with a degree of "confidence indicative of their long-range outlook."

Harvard Man Says Autos Make All Roads Obsolete

Detroit, June 1 (AP)—Dr. Miller McClintock, traffic research engineer, told the National Planning Conference today that the American street and highway system must be scrapped and rebuilt unless the automobile is to become a "malignant growth."

"This will cost 57 billion dollars," he said, "but will pay for itself in 43 years according to an estimate made by Frank T. Sheets, a leading highway engineer."

Dr. McClintock, head of the bureau for street traffic research at Harvard University, displayed to the convention delegates illustrations of a "model city of 1960" designed by Norman Bel Geddes as an inevitable development of the "automotive revolution."

"Just as industry, after the industrial revolution, had to abandon past methods in order to utilize mass production, so the nation must discard its useless street and highway system, designing and rebuilding roadways so that traffic may move swiftly, unimpeded and safely," Dr. McClintock said.

"We cannot look with equanimity upon a transportation mechanism which takes an annual toll of 38,000 lives and injures more than a million. Nor can we look with tolerance upon shackles which fetter this newest servant of mankind."

The "Model City" envisions buildings 2,000 feet tall, grouped at natural focal points of traffic, with intervening parks and open spaces. A network of elevated express boulevards is superimposed on a ground-level street system for local traffic. Ramps run from the local thoroughfares to the express lanes.

Arterial streets cross at different levels. Turn-offs permit motorists to change direction without crossing a traffic stream. That, Dr. McClintock pointed out, would eliminate "intersectional friction," the major cause of traffic congestion.

EDITOR GRIFFIN WINS PRAISE

New York, June 1—William Griffin, newspaper editor and publisher who has been mentioned as a possible Democratic nominee for mayor, was lauded as the embodiment of the Americanism of Theodore Roosevelt at Memorial Day exercises in the Bronx.

Addressing 2000 persons at services of the Richard J. McNally Post, American Legion, Assistant New York District Attorney Eugene J. Finnegan urged the Legion to "destroy all alien-isms—whether Communism, Fascism or Hitlerism."

"One way we can oppose internationalism is to refuse to lend money to European countries to pile armament on armament for the purpose of destroying one another. A second way to support the vigorous Americanism of men like William Griffin, owner of the New York Enquirer, who embodies the true American spirit of 'T. R.'"

Prince Will Form New Japan Cabinet

Tokyo, June 1 (INS)—Emperor Hirohito today commanded Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the House of Peers, to for ma Cabinet to succeed that of Senjuro Hayashi, who handed in his resignation yesterday.

Prince Konoye accepted the premiership.

Chances for Young Men Good Yet, He Asserts

In the sixth chapter of his informal autobiography, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., reveals his philosophy of "big business."

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, SR.

(Distributed exclusively by Universal Service, by special arrangement with Doubleday Doran and Company. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

Beyond question there is a suspicion of corporations.

There may be reason for such suspicion very often; for a corporation may be moral or the reverse.

But it is folly to condemn all corporations because some are bad, or even to be unduly suspicious of all, because some are bad.

The corporation in form and character has come to stay—that is a thing that may be depended upon. Even small firms are becoming corporations, because it is a convenient form of partnership.

It is equally true that combinations of capital are bound to continue and to grow, and this need not alarm even the most timid if the corporation, or the series of corporations, is properly conducted with due regard for the rights of others.

The day of individual competition in large affairs is past and gone—you might just as well argue that we should go back to hand labor and throw away our efficient machines—and the sober good sense of the people will accept this fact when they have studied and tried it out. Just see how the list of stockholders in the great corporations is increasing by leaps and bounds.

Small Business Gone

This means that all these people are becoming partners in great businesses.

It is a good thing—it will bring a feeling of increased, responsibility to the managers of the corporations and will make the people who have their interest involved study the facts impartially before condemning or attacking them.

On this subject of combinations I have often expressed my opinions; and, as I have not changed my mind, I am not averse to repeating them now, especially as the subject seems again to be so much in the public eye.

Much that one man cannot do alone two can do together, and once admit the fact that cooperation, or, what is the same thing, combination, is necessary on a small scale, the limit depends solely upon the necessities of business.

Two persons in partnership may be a sufficiently large combination for a small business, but if the business grows or can be made to grow, more persons and more capital must be taken in.

The business may grow so large that a partnership ceases to be a proper instrumentality for its purposes, and then a corporation becomes a necessity.

It is too late to argue about advantages of industrial combinations. They are a necessity. And if Americans are to have the privilege of extending their business in all the states of the union, and into foreign countries as well, they are a necessity on a large scale, and require the agency of more than one corporation.

The dangers are that the power conferred by combination may be abused, that combinations may be formed for speculation in stocks rather than for conducting business, and that for this purpose prices may be temporarily raised instead of being lowered.

These abuses are possible to a greater or less extent in all combinations, large or small, but this fact is no more of an argument against combinations than the fact that steam may explode is an argument against steam.

Combination is necessary and its abuses can be minimized; otherwise our legislators must acknowledge their incapacity to deal with the most important instrument of industry.

In the hearing of the industrial commission in 1899, I then said that if I were to suggest any legislation regarding industrial combinations it would be:

First, federal legislation under which corporations may be created and regulated, if that be possible.

Second, in lieu thereof, state legislation as nearly uniform as possible, encouraging combinations of persons and capital for the purpose of carrying on industries, but permitting state supervision, not of a character to hamper industries, but sufficient to prevent frauds upon the public.

I still feel as I did in 1899.

I am far from believing that this will adversely affect the individual.

Great Era Ahead

The great economic era we are entering will give splendid opportunity to the young man of the future.

One often hears the men of this new generation say that they do not have the chances that their fathers and grandfathers had.

How little they know of the disadvantages from which we suffered!

In my young manhood we had everything to do and nothing to many of them say, to which I do it with; we had to hew our own paths along new lines; we had little experience to go on.

Whereas now we have a system of commercial ratings, everything was then haphazard and we suffered from a stupendous war (the Civil War) and all the disasters which fofllowed.

Compare this day with that. Our comforts and opportunities are multiplied a thousand fold. The resources of our great land are now actually opening up and are scarcely touched; our home markets are vast, and we have just begun to think of the foreign peoples we can serve—the people who are years behind us in civilization.

In the east a quarter of the human race is just awakening. The men of this generation are entering into a heritage which makes their fathers' lives look poverty-stricken by comparison.

I am naturally an optimist, and when it comes to a statement of what our people will accomplish in the future, I am unable to express myself with sufficient enthusiasm.

You hear a good many people of pessimistic disposition say much about greed in American life.

One would think to hear them talk that we were a race of misers in this country . . .

I confess I have no sympathy with the idea so often advanced that our basis of all judgments in this country is founded on money.

If this were true, we should be a nation of money hoarders instead of spenders. Nor do I admit that we are so small-minded a people as to be jealous of the success of others.

It is the other way about. We are the most extraordinarily ambitious, and the success of one man in any walk of life spurs the others on. It does not sour them, and it is a libel even to suggest so great a meanness of spirit . . .

When a man's affairs are not going well, he hates to study the books and face the truth.

No Success Short-Cut

My ideas of business are no doubt old-fashioned, but the fundamental principles do not change from generation to generation, and sometimes I think that our quick-witted American business men, whose spirit and energy are so splendid, do not always sufficiently study the real underlying foundations of business management.

Sometimes I feel that we Americans think we can find a short road to success, and it may appear that often this feat is accomplished; but real efficiency in work comes from knowing your facts and building upon that sure foundation.

Consider for a moment how much would have been left undone if our prosperous American business men had sat down with folded arms when they had acquired a competency.

Some of these men, however, are so absorbed in their business affairs that they hardly have time to think of anything else. If they do interest themselves in a work outside of their own office and undertake to raise money, they begin with an apology, as if they are ashamed of themselves.

"I am no beggar," I have heard could only reply: "I am sorry you feel that way about it."

I have been this sort of beggar all my life and the experiences I have had were so interesting and important to me that I will venture to speak of them in a later chapter.

Lynn Man Killed Chasing His Hat

When the hat blew from his head, Waterhouse stepped into the street to retrieve it. He was struck by a car which, police said, was operated by Albert W. Miner, 22, of Henry avenue, Melrose. Waterhouse died in Lynn Hospital.

DICTATORS' END SEEN BY NEYLAN

(Special to Boston Evening American)

Atlanta, Ga., June 1—John Francis Neylan, noted San Francisco jurist, attorney and author, addressed the graduates of Oglethorpe University on problems that menace the world.

He spoke of the tendency to "classify all men in terms of political spirits of different hues, such as red, white, black and brown."

In this connection Mr. Neylan said:

"I predict that within ten years there will not be a dictator in power in any civilized country.

"Personal government is doomed."

Referring to the axiom, "Where law ends, tyranny begins," Mr. Neylan said:

"Its truth has been demonstrated within the boundaries of our own nation within the past few months. But to our everlasting credit, let it be written that the step toward tyranny awakened the country to its dangers."

Mr. Neylan spoke of America's financial, industrial and political wizards. He said the political wizards started out to fix everything by passing laws.

PLENTY OF JOBS

"In fact we couldn't wait to pass laws in an orderly manner," he asserted, adding:

"We sanctioned the creation of innumerable bureaus and commissions to pass rules and regulations which would have the effect of law; these bureaus and commissions created thousands of laws and rules and hundreds of thousands of political jobs for people to enforce these laws and rules and regulations; we have been taxing ourselves to dangerous limits to support these jobholders, and we are still waiting to enter into paradise.

"Truly we are a gullible people."

UNEMPLOYED CLOUD

Mr. Neylan asked the graduates to consider the weird story of conditions with which they will be confronted.

He referred first to the "unemployment cloud," saying that the sensible thing to do would be to find out how many employable people are still unemployed. He said:

"The truth is that so-called relief has become one of the great assets of politics, and the politicians do not want the people to know their money is being squandered.

"I believe you can dismiss from your minds the idea that there is any excess of unemployment over and above the normal number in any nation of 130,000,000 people."

The Pope of Peace

A Grateful World Felicitates Pius XI On His Eightieth Birthday

REGARDLESS of creed, men and women of good will the world over give thanks that Pope Pius XI has been spared to attain the age of 80, and pray that he may live to see many years more.

Born on May 31, 1857, His Holiness assumed the burdens of the Papacy after an already full career of service to his God and to his Church.

To few of the long line of successors of St. Peter has the spiritual sceptre been entrusted at a more critical period in history.

The wounds of the war were fresh when Pius entered the Vatican.

They are still unhealed, perhaps even more inflamed than they were then.

YET every effort of the Pontiff has been bent toward assuaging their pangs, toward turning humanity's thoughts from conquest and oppression to fellowship and Christian charity.

His stand against the godlessness and cruelty of Communism and Nazism has been adamant, as must be the stand of all save utter materialists.

But his preachments in behalf of peace and tolerance touch the heart by their tenderness and sympathy, by their appeal to all that is best and noblest in the human soul.

He has rallied the vast influence of the Church against a suicidal European conflict.

Though that war may come, none can doubt that his counsel has delayed it, and may have prevented it altogether.

SELDOM has there been a more moving occasion than that of the Pope's Christmas broadcast from his sickbed, when he called upon the peoples to remember the ideals of Jesus of Nazareth, and to put away the philosophies of exploitation and strife.

He said then:

"Paul, an untiring herald of peace and of Christ, wrote to the Corinthians of his time these profound words, 'For God is not a God of dissension, but of peace.'

"With this appeal to the world we join—and today more fervently than ever—in our prayer to God for that 'tranquillity of order' in which alone peace can exist for the execution of that individual and collective justice without which no order is possible."

None can doubt that this message to the nations, perhaps the supreme exertion of his life, changed the course of world events for the better, gave pause of the inciters of racial hatreds, and deferred—let us hope permanently—that clash of arms which threatened to plunge all Europe into chaos.

TO this and succeeding generations, Pius XI will be known as the Pope of Peace, the Vicar of Christ, who from the valley of the shadow of death averted the curse of war from the world that millions might LIVE.

Boston Accents Barred

That is the advice of Ranny Weeks, popular orchestra leader, son of Everett's former mayor.

"Motion picture directors don't want Western twangs, Southern drawls or Boston culture," writes Ranny, now a movie recruit. "Our 'cawn'ts' and 'aren'ts' are too affected for them."

Persistently, with more success than either Noah Webster or Dr. Johnson won with their dictionaries, radio and cinema are discouraging our cherished "provincialisms" of speech and creating a new, cosmopolitan English.

The purpose is to evolve a diction that may some day sound the same to the Harvard professor or to the Wales coal miner.

In other words, the "Tower of Babel" is crumbling. It is becoming a mill. And all who pass through it emerge with a regimented tongue.

Ideal

THE best workers in the public service are often those we hear the least about. Miss Caroline S. Delano, veteran aide in Secretary of State Cook's office, is an example.

Saturday, when the House and Senate were noisily celebrating the end of the legislative session, Miss Delano quietly closed her desk and announced her retirement.

Behind her were 44 years of service to the State.

It was her wish that she leave Beacon Hill without celebration or tribute, but Mr. Cook would not have it so.

"I want to say that Miss Delano has been one of the most faithful workers in the State's service," he said. "She is an IDEAL secretary."

It was the truth. Miss Delano provided the proof. She smiled, said nothing.

Safe City

QUINCY, largest United States city without a traffic death up to June 1, has earned the right to be proud.

With automobile accident fatalities of the country 21 per cent in excess of last year's figures, Quincy's record can be properly called a marvelous achievement.

Though her population exceeds 71,000 and her streets are necessarily heavily traveled, she has contributed not one death to the 11,360 killed since January 1 throughout the rest of the country.

The explanation is simple. Quincy police enforce the traffic laws. And motorists there respect it.

What Quincy has done other cities can and SHOULD do. To praise her isn't enough. It is better to imitate her.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 1—Manhattan, calumniators to the contrary, is regarded by many as a city for perfect sleep.

O. O. McIntyre

George M. Cohan for years kept a room in a hotel facing bustling Times Square because he could always, when worn to a frazzle, catch up with sleep there.

Mrs. Rex Beach used to come to town from Ardsley for a refreshing night's slumber. And Montague Glass, worn by tossing innumerable nights in a leafy countryside sanctuary in Connecticut, would often motor to town to rest for a few nights.

Just this morning I talked to a gentleman from Hartford who had been sleeping ever so badly for months. But on his first night in the roaring metropolis he had slept until 11 a. m. the next day. And was ducking a matinee so he could get in a nap.

Noise does not seem to bother the calloused Gothamite. He can sleep anywhere. Almost every whang-bang subway car has a nodder or so. All the people asleep at cafe tables are not drunks. And there are records of chronic snorers at theatrical first nights. One is always watched by ushers.

Frank Sullivan, a trigger-minded humorist, if there ever was one, muffed a golden opportunity at a Dutch Treat show. He was playing Charles the Second and carrying his decapitated head in the crook of an arm. Marc Connelly, playing opposite to him, said: "Speak louder, they can't hear you out front." And Sullivan merely simpered "I'm yelling as loud as I can."

A second later he suddenly thought how he might have shrieked "I've already yowled my head off." He won't get such a chance again, so he won't.

A social secretary provides a celebrity list which she considers parfait for a New York tea. One which she said would make any host or hostess purr. Here it is: Joseph Hergesheimer, Evelyn Laye, Clifton Webb and his mother, Ina Claire, Fanny Marianoff, Fanny Hurst, Carl Van Vechten, the Lawrence Tibbetts, James Forbes, the Jock Whitneys, Frederic March, the Brock Pembertons, Tallulah Bankhead, Noel Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Alexander Woollcott and Walter Chrysler, Jr.

She also said many on this list received several invitations for teas daily but attended only one or two a week.

The list, however, overlooked the No. 1 party whooper-upper—Harry Evans. One of the alliterative society scribblers described him as "a beaming bounce of banter." Florida born, he came to New York as a movie critic on the old Life, later published a magazine of his own and also acts as a talent scout for a Hollywood studio. He is a ballroom dancer of professional calibre, a raconteur extraordinary, plays the piano and has a trigger mind for smart talk.

He often takes over the entertainment when he visits a night club and soon has everybody on the floor cutting capers.

Apropos of nothing whatever, I believe the most aristocratic of all names was that of the late Britisher—Captain the Honorable Frederick E. Guest.

Douglas Fairbanks on his drop-into town a year ago had begun to look droopy and curly around the edges. Photographed in the night clubs, the prints showed him a disillusioned Don Juan. He might have been a tired business man from Milwaukee seeing the town under protest.

But on his most recent visit he was again the lean, sturdily-knit and agile Doug, looking fit to scamper up a skyscraper cornice or hurdle six elephants at a bound.

While waiting in a car near a Waldorf entrance I saw Fairbanks fairly zoom through a revolving door and [illegible] a taxi in a sort of swallow-like skim. Shortly afterward another and new celebrity of the cinema emerged cock-a-hoop and sartorially ashine—Edward G. Robinson. The years, too, seem to have dropped from him, largely because he was identified so long with old men parts on the stage. He also occupies a Waldorf suite while in town.

The miracle of the movies! Not so long ago he was a familiar figure in the booking offices, hearing the usual "Sorry, nothing today" and residing in one of the second-rate hotels in the 40's.

Incidentally, from the exit to the corner I noticed that more heads turned to look at Robinson than at Fairbanks. How quickly the public forgets.

An Algonquin regular lunch patron, terribly impressed by the glittery names, had his Big Moment the other noon. He had a real live actress as his luncheon guest. As he passed Frank Case's table he stopped and beamed: "I want you to meet Miss Cipher. She plays the Pearl in the Oyster Shell in the French Casino tableau."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Should Dad expect to sit back and take things easy as soon as the youngsters are able to carry the load?"

Helen Jane Hall hurls this tear bomb.

Elsie Robinson

"I'm not considering," says she, "fathers who are old, or ill, or really unable to find work. I mean competent American men in their prime—men who are fully able to support their families.

"Why should such men quit their positions, take to the front porch rocker and then proceed to make a general nuisance of themselves—particularly to their wives—by their endless gabbling, leaving their responsibility to be assumed by their children who are sometimes still in their 'teens.

"A fine girl friend of mine—a telephone operator—is on the breaking point from such a situation. She and two sisters have the entire care and support of a large family, including four small brothers, while their father sits idle.

"Boys and girls in their early twenties should be preparing for homes of their own, instead of becoming domestic slaves. Any decent son or daughter is willing to give a fair amount toward the family expenses—but why should parents demand everything?

"I know girls who deliberately turn down advancement. 'The more we earn, the more they'll expect!' they say. 'It's better not to be too prosperous . . . then we can keep parental demands within bounds.'

"Helen Jane Hall, Baltimore, Md."

Medals for your courage, Helen, in tackling a tricky subject—also a $10 prize. And, lest anyone doubt your statements, let me assure them, both as newspaper reporter and mother of 30 years' standing, THEY ARE TRUE.

EXPLOITATION FLAYED

America has long viewed, with amazement and contempt, the attitude of the alien parent who regards his children as "negotiable property." But now parents of American birth are adopting the same attitude.

WHY? Has the tremendous influx of women workers really made it impossible for men to find work? Or, worse yet, has the working wife's willingness to carry the load undermined male pride . . . made fathers, of any age, willing to let "mom and the kids do it?"

Having started one major quarrel, let's leap into another. MAGGIE JOHNSON speaking—and stating some mighty deplorable facts about working girls' conditions — and winning the other $10 prize.

"Dear Miss Robinson,

"I would like the crowd's frank opinion on the working situation of typists, cashiers, bookkeepers and sales girls. I am writing from Chicago but I have no doubt there are the same or worse conditions in other cities.

"I am familiar with the various jobs I have named and it would be a public scandal if people really knew what some of us have to endure. I refer not only to the hours and wages but to the insanitary environment.

"Yes, a law has been passed stating that girls and women are to work only eight hours a day, but there are endless cases where they go over two or three hours as a regular thing. Employers are constantly snooping or have spies on the staff. And if the health department should see the accommodations given many girls they would close the doors of the establishment.

"Sometimes girls are forced to go nearly all day without water, as there is no hydrant available and we have no time to go out and get it.

"Maggie Johnson, Chicago, Ill."

"DOTING MOTHERS"

It gives her a bad, bitter start MAGGIE, and the shame, say I, on the country which permits it! GREAT AS AMERICA IS, SHE CAN NEVER BE CALLED TRULY CIVILIZED AS LONG AS SHE PERMITS ONE WORKER TO BE EXPLOITED AND IMPOSED UPON—AND WITH ALL THE POWER THAT LIES IN ME I PLEDGE MYSELF AND THIS COLUMN TO FIGHT SUCH EXLOITATION!

Last—lest we end on a heartache—here's EVA REEDER with a timely tantrum on that year-round pest, THE DOTING MOTHER!

"Dear Elsie:

"Can't something be done with these adoring mothers to make them see that they are not only ruining their daughters' lives but the lives of the unfortunate men they marry?

"How often I have heard them say 'I'm not going to make my Mary Jane learn to sew. You can buy ready-made clothes just as cheap. As for cooking, I'd rather do it myself than have the darling messing around the kitchen.

" 'Besides, I'm not going to have any daughter of mine ruin her hands and shape and be a slave for any man!' "

"Can't these idiots see what misery they are laying up for their daughters? It's a hundred to one chance these girls will marry men of medium circumstances. Housework will be necessary—and then what?

"Eva La Verne Reeder,
"Oklahoma City, Okla."

After which EVA, winner of the $5 prize, suggests that Mama should be made to eat the biscuits daughter cooks and wear Honey Bunch's home-made bungalow aprons. Girl, you are a genius, and you make Mussolini with his castor oil cures look like an amateur.

RULES

Each Monday, Miss Robinson awards $25 in prizes—$10 each, to the writers of the first two letters published; $5 to the writer of the third letter.

Writers must be no more than 30 years of age.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Our taxspenders have more ways of wasting the people's money than a dog has fleas. The Department of Interior appropriation bill considered by the lower House of Congress last week carried an item of $110,000 "FOR DEFRAYING THE DEFICITS OF THE MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENTS" OF THREE CITIES IN THE VIRGIN ISLANDS. And the deficits to be covered were those which are expected to be incurred during the COMING fiscal year of 1938. Did you ever hear the beat of that?

Before this proposed appropriation for the payment of expected municipal deficits in the cities of the Virgin Islands was knocked out by a point of order, it was stated on the floor of the House by Congressman Johnson of Oklahoma that "this item has been carried in the bill year after year and no one has ever raised the question as to the authority."

Municipalities in the United States are expected to take care of their own deficits. If they had known Congress was appropriating taxpayers' money from the Federal Treasury to pay municipal deficits in the Virgin Islands, what a clamor there would have been for Congress to take care of municipal deficits in American cities.

Congressman Griswold of Indiana made an amazing statement the other day. He declared on the floor of the House that "IT COSTS THE TAXPAYER $172.80 TO HAVE $660 TRANSFERRED FROM THE BLANK CHECK CONGRESS HAS GIVEN MR. HOPKINS TO THE MAN ON RELIEF." He went on to say there "is a spread of $284.40 between the man on relief and the taxpayer. Leave out the cost of materials and you still have a spread of $172.80, or 20 per cent per man unit for dispensing the money."

Certainly there is something wrong with the administration of relief if it costs $172.80 to dispense $660 worth of relief.

Another criticism by Congressman Griswold that should be heeded is the complaint that "while tax-paying citizens suffer from either high taxes or the pride that keeps them off relief, we carry on our relief rolls 120,000 aliens."

He cited three cases of aliens employed in the relief administration at salaries of $2300 a year, $3000 a year and $3200 a year, respectively.

That is outrageous. It is a scandal to tax American people to provide relief or soft political jobs for aliens.

Robbery is a serious crime. Criminals who engage in it and use deadly weapons to enforce their demands are among the most dangerous enemies of society because they are potential murderers. Every bandit is prepared to kill to get what he wants or to escape with his loot. He is a murderer at heart until he becomes a murderer in fact.

Every law enforcement officer takes his life in his hands when he attempts to capture an armed bandit. The modern desperado shoots on the slightest provocation. A state policeman and a deputy sheriff in Indiana, on the lookout for bandits who had just robbed a bank, tried to halt an automobile containing four men. The occupants of the car opened fire with machine guns and both officers fell.

Our Streamlined Age

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Summer seems to sprout more odd little four-leaf-clover news items than Winter—such as the Baltimore story of the two blue-ribbon cooks who can't find a job.

Edwin C. Hill

These Negro mammies were famous cooks for the Southern gentry, regal and puissant in the sant in the big and spacious kitchens of yesteryear, but now they're just shelved in the dry storage closet.

There's no more work for these mettlesome old gals, and they hang up the ladle and the spoon. They're too fat. One weights 220 pounds, and the other, 300. You couldn't get them into a modern kitchen with a crowbar. Once in, they couldn't circulate. Until we develop roundhouse kitchens with turn-tables, they are victims of technological unemployment.

NO SPACE TO SPARE

Hoopskirts were all right in the days when we had plenty of elbow room, but any theater of today would be bankrupt if it had to have seats wide enough to accommodate the grand dames of GODEY'S LADIES' BOOK. And think of one of them trying to undress in a Pullman berth and stow her clothes in the hammock! Or climbing into a rumble-seat!

The streamlining of utensils, machines and houses parallels the modern tenuous trend of the human figure. Which is cause and which is effect? Transportation and communications shrink the world. A feverish nationalism, as intense as if both the above Gargantum cooks should be squeezed into one six-by-eight kitchen at once, develops all over the world. No longer does the British empire bulge out over seas and jungles without challenge.

Artist-technicians, like Norman Bel Geddes, are changing our environment by a blend of art and utility—or, to put it differently, a fusion of beauty and function. Deep-dishers elaborate all this into a functional, rather than a possessive economy.

The Sistine Chapel of our age will show the Hand of Omnipotence playing on an octave of push buttons. In Michelangelo's day, the Popes and the de Medicis used artists as press agents of their ideas and symbols. Great murals were political and cultural billboards. They portrayed ample, buxom ladies and fat cherubs and plenty of beef in regal portraiture, if that was what the artists saw.

That was in an age with a wide wheel-base, before Sir Francis Drake circled the globe and started the pinching process.

WIVES DIED YOUNG

Getting back to the Baltimore mammies and the dog-house kitchens, certain industrious scientists are clocking the footsteps of the housewife. They find that in one of those old-fashioned kitchens—festooned with "yarbs" and peppers and maybe a side of bacon on the beams—the housewife took 281 steps in making a dish of cornstarch pudding. Now she turns it out with 45 steps.

The previous 87 operations have been reduced to 64. The housewife used to walk about eight miles a day—now only five miles. The housewife lives longer, there's no doubt of that.

Hardscrabble farmers used to wear out five or six wives in those huge farm kitchens of theirs, as many a summer stroll through the graveyards will show.

On the score of utility and simple human well-being, Norman Bel Geddes and the domestic science and streamliners and conveyor-belt people probably have the best of the argument. "Nobody loves a fat man" is the theme song of this age. But art and creativeness don't seem to have any thing to do with waistlines.

Alexander Pope was a skinny little wisp of a man, and old Sam Johnson was a glutton and a fat man. While comparisons are dangerous, the Foyot Restaurant in Paris has what I believe to be a huge, ancient kitchen without a touch or a hint of modernization. And the last time I saw it, they had two of the fattest cooks alive.

Procrustes used to hack a few inches off his guests to fit them into his bed. Is this some more Procrustean business when we make a streamlined world and then decree that everybody must get his weight down to fit into it? Nature works that way.

WE ADAPT SELVES

But man has never before taken over this prerogative. We duck and side-step and conform as best we may, and somehow manage to stay on as guests in the old-fashioned house of life.

Now we drastically and swiftly make over our environment and make new laws of survival. It looks like a pretty large order, and I wonder if we know enough to take it on.

Anyway, if I were rich, I'd stake those two old Baltimore mammies to a kitchen as big as the Grand Central station, put them somewhere near Charleston, and go down there and eat my head off, and the devil take the streamliners.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

The Chamberlain family in England occupies a place in the country's political structure something like the Roosevelts (all Roosevelts) do in the United States.

The most famous of the family was Joseph Chamberlain, "Brummagem Joe," the father of Neville and Austen, who died in 1914.

Arthur Neville Chamberlain as Prime Minister can be depended on "to play cricket" with the Throne, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the people—all at once.

This is strikingly illustrated in the case of Zoltan Rudas, high in Communist affairs in Hungary under Bela Kun.

A few days ago he returned to Budapest and after receiving a 15-year prison term said to court officers:

"TAKE ME TO PRISON IN A STREET CAR SO THAT I CAN SEE SOMETHING OF MY BELOVED FATHERLAND."

Rudas' term ought to be reduced because he didn't claim to be that fantastic fellow, an "Internationalist," as most Communists do.

Daniel Muir, a British soldier who rescued a woman from drowning in the Thames and received for it a medal and $50 from the Carnegie Trust Fund, must be smiling just such a bitter smile today.

His wife, whom he had deserted in Glasgow, read an account of his deed, hurried to London and charged him with bigamy. Muir is now serving six months at hard labor.

Just as the constitutional convention was convening in Philadelphia on May 25, 1787, the Marquis de Lafayette in the Assembly of Notables in Paris was demanding of King Louis the Sixteenth that he convoke a states general, "and something better if possible."

This was the first gun of the French Revolution.

Lafayette, who had fought for the American Colonists in our revolutionary war, saw what was taking place in Philadelphia. He was demanding the same thing for France. He finally got a states-general, or "people's parliament."

But what a mighty difference in results! France went through a revolution that tore her up by the roots and then a bloody reign of terror. Afterward came Napoleon and the Napoleonic wars.

Louis the Sixteenth had his head taken off, while Lafayette returned to America in 1824, where he was overwhelmed with public receptions and a grant of $200,000 by Congress.

But, best of all, he saw in America the results of a revolution that had NO ROBESPIERRE OR NAPOLEON.
